Sculptural Science

Pink Alien? Glamrocket? These are the unique names of some of the award-winning jewelry created by Karin Jacobson. The Minneapolis, Minnesota, designer was recently named the American Jewelry Design Council's New Talent Competition grand prize winner. Jacobson put her imagination and design skills to work with her line of sculptural jewelry, which is often inspired by playful themes from toys, comics, and science-fiction. The line includes rings and pendants in sterling silver, cubic zirconia, and gemstones. Jacobson debuted her collection at the JA Show in New York this past summer.
