New Tatter-a-fact® Episode!
Less Than 1% of Your Clients Will Have Warm Skin
Episode #56 with Teryn Darling

Did you know only about 1% of the world can be classified with warm skin? On this Tatter-a-fact episode, discover the secrets and understand warm undertones, the significance of modifiers, and the role of overtone in creating stunning results. Is it better to add too much warmth and have it heal too warm? Or is it better to not add enough warmth and have them heal a little ashy? Let us know why in the YouTube comments!

I also talk about a Facebook question that brought a lot of heat and offer my insight and wealth of color theory knowledge to the table to explain the situation.

The key to perfecting your craft is not in mastering one thing but in mastering your foundations. Understanding color theory and having the knowledge to correctly advise your clients is of utmost importance. I am in the works of consolidating and expanding my online color theory course into a reference book and checklists to assist you in target color selection, color corrections, and more. Stay tuned for the latest updates!

Join me as I explore Warm Skin Tones, modifiers, and the importance of color theory education!

A dark brown with a hint of charcoal (smoky brown) eyebrow color. Espresso contains no warmth additives and heals like a charcoal brown. Because of the charcoal influence, this color will heal darker than Navajo Brown. Use on Fitzpatrick IV-V skin types. Exceptional color for a client who requests a dark eyebrow without any warmth. Mix with Hazelnut for this type of client to avoid having a brow too cool or warm.

Understanding the Distinctions: Li Pigments EU REACH Line vs. Original Aqua Line

The permanent makeup industry has experienced significant changes due to the implementation of new bans and restrictions under EU REACH. These regulations have mandated that pigment manufactures reformulate in order to comply with the new EU REACH Laws. We understand the confusion this may have caused, but there are a few important distinctions between the pigment lines. Allow us to shed light on the differences between the Li Pigments EU REACH line and their original Aqua line, highlighting the adjustments made to meet the new regulations and the benefits associated with the updated formulations!

EU REACH Laws and the Reformulation:
Under the EU REACH Laws, pigment manufacturers must adhere to specific guidelines regarding the balance between iron oxide and organic colorants in each pigment. Although the original Aqua line did not contain any banned ingredients, it primarily consisted of iron oxide-dominant pigments with minimal organic content. To align with the EU REACH requirements, Li Pigments undertook the challenging task of reformulating their Aqua colors into a hybrid range that strikes a harmonious balance between organics and iron oxides...
