

Mimo 710-S Monitor Flips Shut to Go Portable

By Mark Wilson

If you're looking for a tiny, extra monitor, Nanovision makes some utilitarian Mimo-branded gear

7

read more: #monitors, #mimo710s, #710s, #nanovision, #mimo, #710, #pcs

(<http://gizmodo.com/5116061/mimo-um+750-7+inch-usb-display-lightning-review>) . But now their latest 710-S monitor adds a bit of flare to the mix.

The Mimo 710-S is the "Mobile Slider" edition of their existing line, a 7-inch, 800x480 USB monitor that opens like a clamshell and rotates 90 degrees depending on your viewing preference. The catch? It costs $20 more than the existing Mimo 710 to attain this new portable formfactor. So if you're not planning to travel with it, you can probably save a few bucks on an older model.

Look for the 710-S when it's released later this month for $150. [Mimo (<http://www.mimomonitors.com/>) via Everything USB (<http://www.everythingusb.com/nanovision-mimo-um-710-s-usb-monitor-16825.html>) via DVICE via Engadget (<http://www.engadget.com/2009/08/04/mimos-710-s-mobile-slider-usb-monitor-gets-low-real-low/>) ]

Send an email to Mark Wilson, the author of this post, at mark@gizmodo.com.