

ARTFULLY DISHEVELED™

BEG, BORROW & STEAL

“Go beg, or steal, or borrow thine expense.”

-Geoffery Chaucer, The Canterbury Tales: The Tale of the Man of Law, 1387

Though in Chaucer's day “Beg, Borrow and Steal” may have spawned from negative connotations, we look to Chaucer's statement in the positive. True character is displayed during times of adversity. We believe in obtaining our goals by any means necessary and find no shame in resorting to this lifestyle in the figurative sense.

It is through this gritty approach that Artfully Disheveled will have you begging for more, borrowing details from the classics, and stealing the attention of any style minded individual.

BEYOND THE BOUNDARY

“Where there is an open mind, there will always be a frontier.”

-Charles F. Kettering, an inventor & native of the great state of Ohio

The ever-moving line of the frontier typifies American fortitude. More free spirited in nature as one nears the edge of settlement, the Artfully Disheveled man wishes to explore this line, to manifest his destiny. He breaks the bonds of custom, offers new experiences and calls out new institutions. Never settling in comfort, the Artfully Disheveled man chooses to live beyond the boundary.

OPEN ROAD

“Strong and content I travel the open road.”

-Walt Whitman, Leaves of Grass: Song of the Open Road, 1856

A source of freedom and a symbol of democracy, the open road welcomes anyone and everyone. On the open road, the trappings of life are left behind. The insignificant and superficial are seen in the rear view mirror while true dreams and honest goals lie ahead.

Here, social differences are set aside. One meets new friends, gathers new companions and makes new memories. It is on the open road where true life lies, always moving ahead while never looking back.
