

When your heart burns for a certain someone but they don't seem to notice you... when you find yourself ready for romance but just can't seem to find someone worthy of your attention... or even when you find yourself wanting a quick fling and you need all the help you can get, a love spell may be just the trick.

There are three basic types of love spells: spells cast upon a specific person to draw them close and make them fall in love, spells to "activate" the vibration of love, passion, and romance around oneself and the immediate environment, and spells to simply act as a beacon to call one's desired love toward them. This warrants a few words of caution: a spell cast upon another to manipulate them to think they love you will ultimately take more effort than it is worth and may cause more problems in the end. (Besides, is it really love if it is artificially created and sustained?) Better to keep one's focus on catching their attention and removing any obstacles that may lie between you, rather than coerce them into an emotional entanglement. Better still to focus your energy upon yourself so that you may become better prepared for true love to manifest when you –and the universe –are ready.

Items needed:

- 2 red or pink figural candles of the correct sexes for your desire
- 1 white candle
- Love Drawing oil (or an oil/herb combination with such herbs as rose, lavender, damiana, etc.)
- 2 paired lodestones
- Magnetic sand
- Sea salt
- Dried rose and lavender flowers
- A piece of rose quartz
- Love Drawing incense (or love drawing herbs such as those listed above)
- A piece of parchment paper
- A pen with red ink (a quill with Dove's Blood ink is traditional for this purpose)

This spell assumes that you know the name of the person that you intend to draw towards you. The text of the spell is designed simply to draw their attention and remove any obstacles that may exist between the two of you, rather than coercing them into emotions that they may not experience on their own. If you do not have a specific person in mind then simply use the word "Beloved" in place of their name.

Take a few slow, deep breaths and center yourself. Light the incense or love drawing herbs and allow the smoke to wash over you and your immediate area as you imagine the spiritual powers within the smoke awakening the presence of love.

Dress the white candle with the oil and either roll it toward yourself in salt, or if it is a glass-encased candle, put a pinch of salt on top. Pray over it and ask the universe to cleanse you and your environment so that you be made ready for love when it comes your way. Light the candle.

Using the parchment and the red ink, prepare a petition paper for your goal. Carve your name, and the name of your beloved, on the appropriate figural candle. On each also carve a heart on the chest area. Dress with the oil and place on either side of the white candle so that they face each other, with the folded petition paper underneath the candle representing you.

Place the rose quartz so that it is in front of the white, and the lodestones "in front" of the figural candles. Mix some of the salt together with the dried rose petals and lavender flowers and sprinkle in a circle around the candles and stones to act as a "container" for the energy. Feed (i.e. sprinkle) the lodestones with the magnetic sand while you say:

*Lover drawn to the Beloved
Draw my lover to me now.*

Light the figural candles and say:

Light of passion now burn bright bring my lover by day or by night.

Each hour move the lodestones a little closer to each other until they meet in the center with the rose quartz in front of the white candle. Allow the candles to burn all the way down. Bury the petition paper and any candle remnants there may be near your front porch (to attract new love) or in your back yard (to strengthen the love you already have). The rose quartz is charged for love so carry it with you (perhaps in a red pouch) and collect the salt and flower petals to use in a love drawing bath. The lodestones should be placed in a red pouch and hidden under your bed. It is done.