2021 FALL/WINTER

OUR BRAND

Gear For Good

Cotopaxi was founded to use business as a vehicle for reducing poverty. Mission drives every aspect of our operations, from our foundation and giving model to our approach to sustainable design and fair trade.

In October of 2013, Cotopaxi's founders set out with the goal of building an outdoor gear company that could make meaningful strides toward reducing global poverty. Today, drawing on best practices from the outdoor industry and global development sector, we create innovative adventure gear that helps to alleviate poverty, moves people to do good, and inspires adventure.

Every year, we direct 1% of our annual revenue to the Cotopaxi Foundation. Launched in 2019, the foundation awards grants to select programs and nonprofits working to alleviate poverty in Latin America and the United States by improving health, education, and livelihoods.

We see design as an opportunity to mitigate our negative impact on the environment, and we're always looking for new ways to be resourceful and forward-thinking when it comes to minimizing our footprint. Using remnant and recycled fabric is a top priority, and we are well on our way to using these eco-friendly materials in all of our products. The Del Dia line uses only remnant fabrics, which could have otherwise ended up in a landfill. Most products use sustainable materials such as responsibly sourced down, recycled nylon, and remnant fleece.

To meet the highest standards of transparency in regards to our supply chain, we share our factories publicly and conduct formal audits with all suppliers. We also work with our manufacturing partners to support worker and sustainability programs such as organic gardens, Fair Trade scholarships, and vt and carbonfund.org to offset all of our bulk shipping through reforestation in the Amazon and alternative energy programs.

Beyond operations, Cotopaxi extends its mission-first approach to areas such as employee experience, community and events, and governance. We have one of the most diverse boards in the start-up world, and employees are rewarded stock options. Through Questival, Cotopaxi has picked up over 1 million pieces of litter, and donated over 15,000 items of food and 1,500 liters of blood. We look forward to doing good more effectively every day.

FALL 2021 INSPIRATION

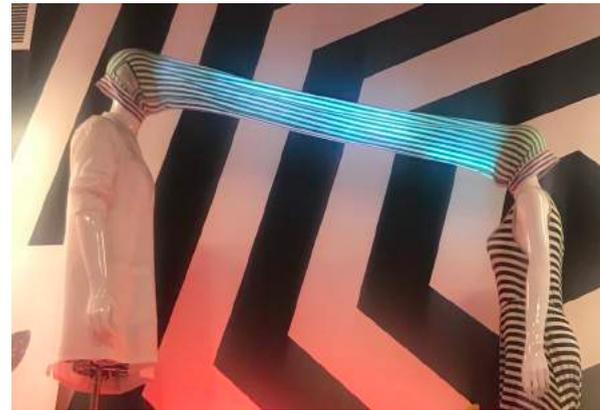

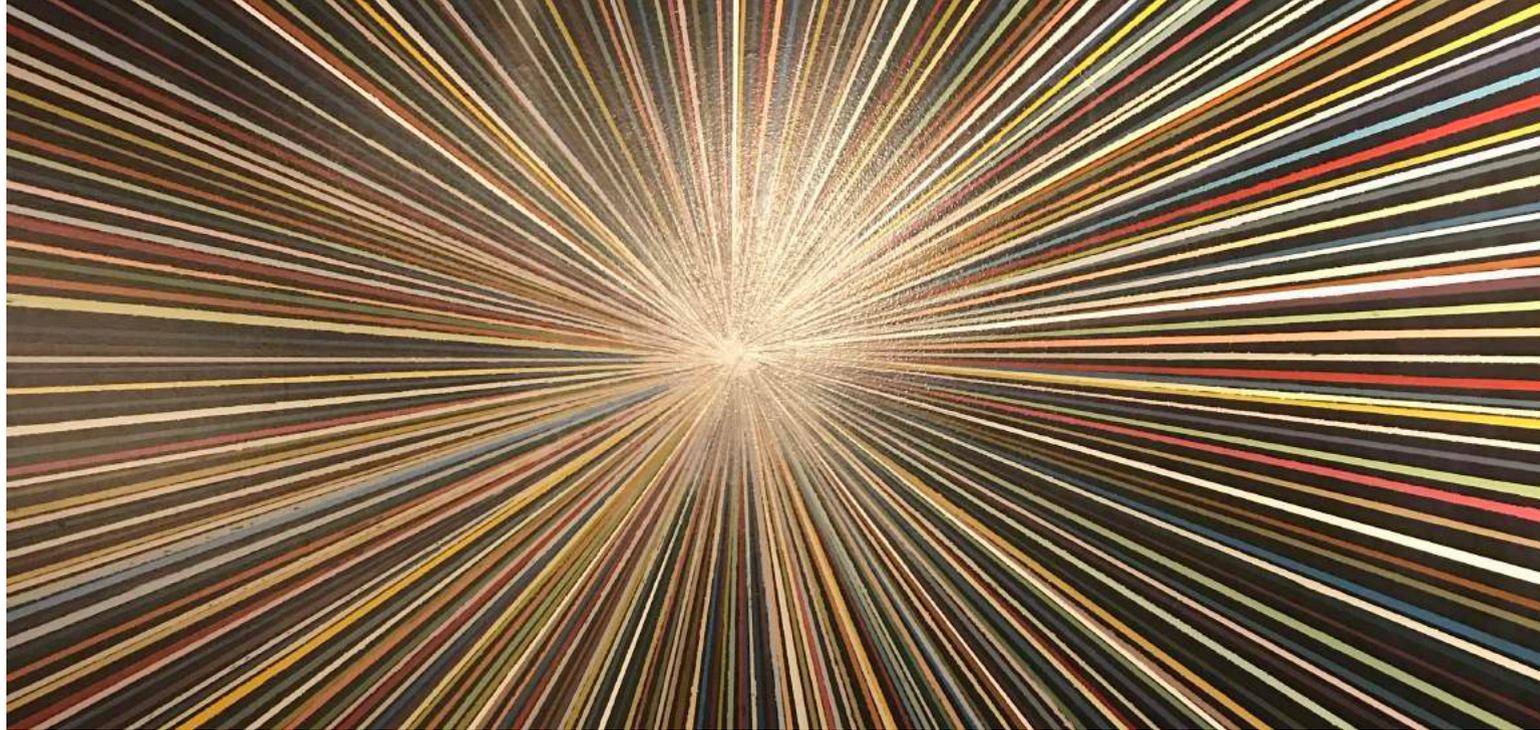

Land of Enchantment

For Fall 2021, New Mexico was our muse. Its capital, Santa Fe, served as our homebase for a range of microadventures.

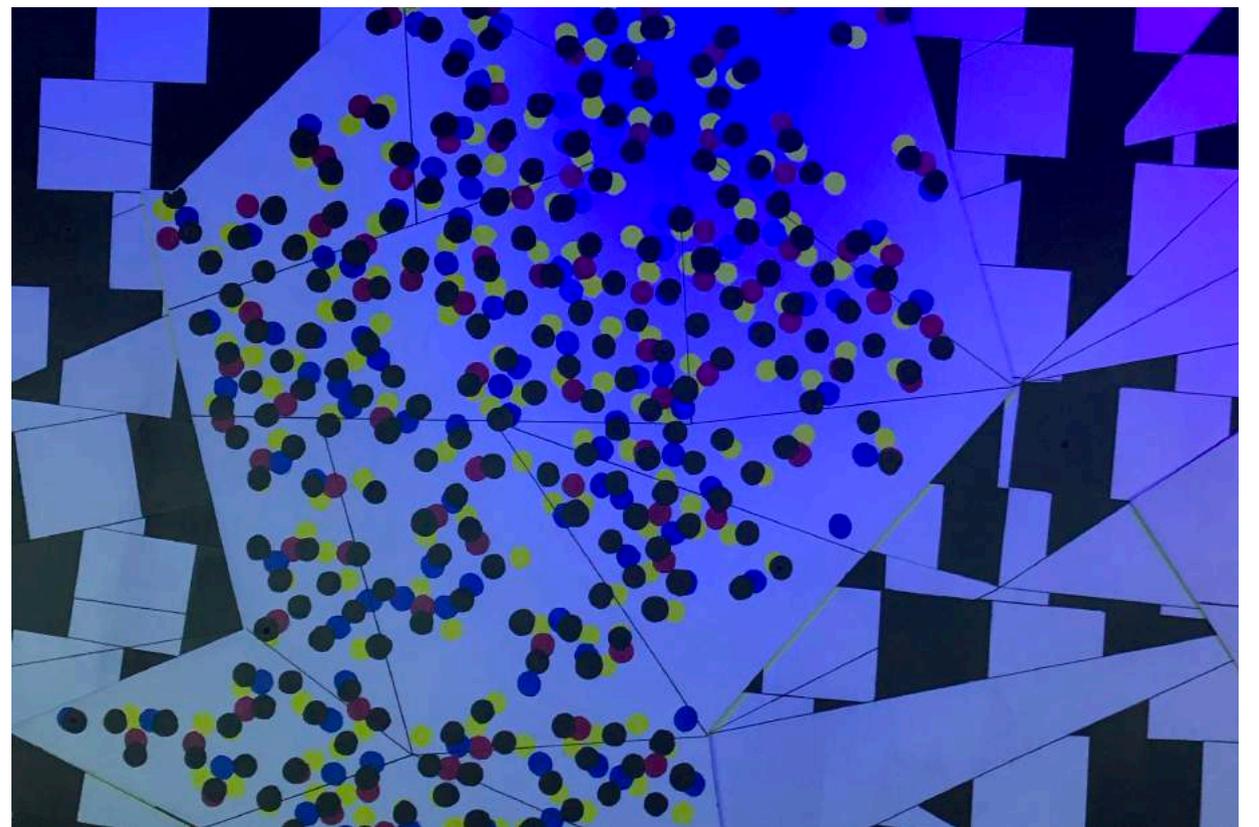

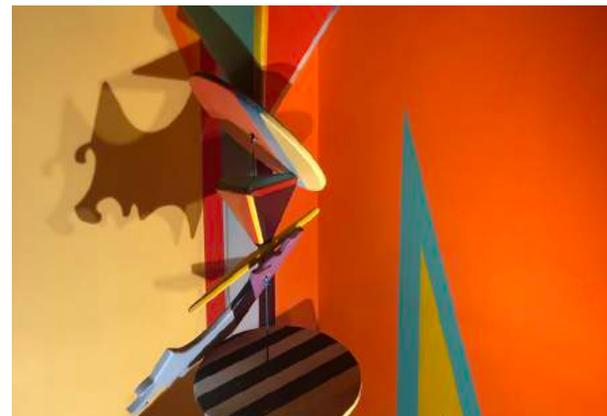

Known for its stunning sunsets, endless horizon, and thriving artistic culture, New Mexico was a generous source of inspiration for our Fall 2021 collection. The vibrant cities of Santa Fe and Taos, in particular, are seamless combinations of urban and natural landscapes that helped us situate ourselves at the intersection of adventure, creativity, and the everyday. Visiting local artists' studios, historic landmarks, and museums helped us to better understand the area's cultural heritage; nearby hikes, hot spring dips, and spontaneous strolls introduced us to the area's natural grandeur. Both played an essential role in helping us design this season's collection.

Fall 2021 is an extension of our Cotopaxi classic, color-blocked style with an even stronger retro influence.

Playing with color-blocking proportions, patchwork, upcycling, trims, and striping helped us create dimension and visual interest in every garment. This renewed attention to detail marries well with the season's New Mexico-inspired color palette, which is built around saturated midtones—a fun nod to the early 1970s and the work of Georgia O'Keefe.

Of course, designing for winter necessitates thoughtful hood and pocket construction—it also presents us with the opportunity to design for warmth without the weight. Our F21 insulation is light, lofty, and toasty, so that the consumer doesn't feel weighed down during the year's chilliest seasons. Above all, in designing the F21 collection, we sought to build functional, multipurpose items that are simple enough to work well on their own, or to be layered with each other for extra heat and versatility. Each piece in this collection was built to thrive in moments of transition, to facilitate an optimistic spirit of everyday adventurism.

Best in Down

The Responsible Down Standard provides consumers with a guarantee that the products they're purchasing are made responsibly.

We're obsessed with making our jackets as great as they can be, both inside and out. This is why all of our insulation pieces adhere to the Responsible Down Standard.

The Responsible Down Standard (RDS) is an independent, voluntary standard that recognizes best practices in animal welfare and ensures that the down and feathers used in a given product are sourced responsibly.

When a product is RDS-certified, it's guaranteed as coming from a transparent, audited supply chain that prioritizes humane treatment of ducks and geese. In other words, it is a best-in-class, ethical marker you can trust. of the best responses currently available. For this reason, using recycled materials is a top priority from the start of our design process. In fact, our team aims to use only remnant or recycled fabric for all of our products, and we are well on our way to achieving this goal.

The Del Día Collection

Leftovers don't have to be lesser, and our Del Día packs are proof.

The philosophy behind our Del Día Collection is simple: Another man's trash can be another man's treasure. With total creative control, our makers in the Philippines repurpose leftover, high-quality materials from other companies' large production runs to create vibrant, one-of-a-kind packs. This keeps perfectly good materials out of the landfill. It also means that each Del Día pack is as unique as the person who owns it.
