SUPERDAD AND DIRECTOR OF ALL AS ONE

When asked how Dubai has changed his life, Matthew finds it hard to know where to start.

"Wow! Well, a lot!" he says. "When I arrived, I was single with no financial or other major commitments. Now, I'm a father of three, have a mortgage and juggle the coordination of family and work life – and love every minute of it!"

The retail management consultant is the founder of the All As One charity which runs an orphanage for children in Freetown, Sierra Leone. He is also father to Dauda, Magda and David, his adopted children.

In 2007, he hopes to achieve even more for the All As One orphanage, with the launch of the Children Caring for Children campaign, and to spend more time with his growing family.

"David, my third child and second son joined our family back in November 2006 and is settling in and getting used to his new home life," he says.

And in terms of his favourite "hot" venues in Dubai? He says; "Venue? I'm a single dad! When do I get time to go out?"
