Something Borrowed

The best wedding parties dress in eco- and ethical finds that stun from ceremony to final song Fashion editor: Amanda Hearst

new england nuptials ↑

A Cape Cod wedding calls for the crisp pleats of a slate-blue maxidress produced in Manhattan's Garment District. Vegan platforms provide edge, while a vintage bracelet brings '50s-era sparkle back into rotation and fossilized earrings trimmed in conflict-free diamonds start conversations.

metropolitan marriage ↑

A belted fuchsia frock made from 100 percent eco-friendly and sustainable jersey pops against T-strap heels in faux patent leather. Drop earrings pieced from repurposed antique chains and charms and a cuff cut from recycled sheet metal add subtle shine for an urban union.

beachside vows ↑

Bring your own tropical touches to the shore by pairing an off-shoulder violet number in earth-friendly silk with a canary clutch made from natural African raffia. Recycled copper and rose-gold chains make for an eye-catching necklace, and leather-free statement sandals won't leave you sinking into the sand.
