Austin Princess Hearse - Black		NEW
APH001	SCALE 1:43	PRICE £22.95

Austin Princess Hearse - Black

The Oxford 1:43 scale series sees more new tooling with the introduction of the Austin Princess hearse.

This follows on from our highly successful model of the Daimler Hearse, which in real life was a successor to the Austin Princess.

The Austin Princess was a luxury 2-ton limousine launched in 1947, when it was the most expensive flagship in the Austin range. Its high quality finish included leather seats, fine carpeting and burred walnut dashboard and door cappings. Because of its comfort and style, it became a great favourite with the Royal Family, also appealing to the rich and famous. Given its luxurious feel, the Princess also fitted the bill as a luxury wedding car as well as the more sombre use as a hearse.

Our newly tooled Austin Princess hearse is registered UVX 24F and is painted all over black, including the chassis, relieved only by silver masking to window frames, radiator grille, bumpers and wheel inserts.

A special detail to note is the metal framework on the roof, which would be used to hold wreaths and flowers perhaps. Internally, the dashboard is brown. The front seats, steering wheel, carpet and door cappings are all black. The rear detail includes the layout needed for transporting the coffin with load bed, door cappings, floor and carpets finished in brown, whilst the rear seats and side panels are black. A final detail, rounding off this fine replica is the Princess marque reproduced in very fine detail above the number plate on the front and below the number plate on the rear.

OXFORD 1:76 SCALE

Not only are we adding the Lotus Evora this month but also we have 1:76 scale versions of the Lotus Elan Plus2 and the Lotus Elite.

Lotus Evora - Canyon Red

Superb new tooling brings a very modern sports car into the Oxford Automobile series. The Evora is a sports car produced by the British car manufacturer Lotus and was launched at the British International Motor Show in July 2008 with a view to extending the Lotus brand beyond its racetrack image. Production started in 2009 and continues today. The Evora comprises a 2 or 2+2 passenger coupé with rear mid-engine and rear-wheel drive. It is available with either a 6-speed automatic or manual gearbox. The name Evora keeps the Lotus tradition of beginning model names with 'E' and is derived from the words evolution, vogue and aura. The car retails at between £45,000 and £50,000 and was named Britain's Best Driver's Car 2009 by car magazine Autocar. Even Jeremy Clarkson was impressed overall! Our Oxford introduction is much more affordable in 1:76 scale and we have chosen the striking Canyon Red colour scheme to launch our first release. Registered AU10 EZO, the red exterior is in sharp contrast to the oyster white interior with black steering wheel. The chassis is black as are the air vents and wipers. The sports wheels feature well-detailed silver and black masking and the exhaust too has been given a silver finish. A couple of final details complete the authentic Oxford replica of this luxury sports car - the Lotus badge has been carefully reproduced in yellow, green and silver on the front of the bonnet, while the Lotus and Evora S marques are printed in silver across the back.

Land Rover Series II Hard Top - British Railways

More new tooling sees the Land Rover Series II entering the 1:76 scale range, coming as a natural extension of the Series I already well established as an Oxford vehicle in its many forms. Look out for more Series II body styles in the near future, too.

The Land Rover Series II was launched in 1958, being superseded by the Series IIA in 1961.

The off road Land Rover came with a number of variants, including 2-door or 4-door option; petrol or diesel; long or short wheel base; and selectable two or four wheel drive feature. The Series II was the first vehicle to use the well-known 2.25 litre petrol engine, which produced 72 hp and was closely related to the 2.0 litre diesel unit still in use today.

The Series II also lent itself to a variety of uses in both rural and urban life.

We have chosen for our first release the famous 'blood and custard' crimson and cream British Railways colour scheme, offset with a mass of chrome. This will undoubtedly appeal to our 00 scale model railway fraternity and will look very good, situated on any railway layout of the period. High on detail, it comes as a hard top with upper body cream and lower body including the bonnet and the rear door in crimson with the British Railways logo in red and cream along the sides. The bonnet also carries the spare wheel. Registered BBH 942B, note particularly the BR vehicle identity B1347S printed in cream on the doors. The highly detailed radiator grille is silver on a matt black mask, while the chassis, bumpers, rear panel, interior and the steering wheel are all black. The wheels are also black but feature a silver boss insert.

The VW is another cult car that is still revered and loved today. So loved was it that film-makers produced a series of movies with the VW Beetle called Herbie, in Pearl White, which was almost humanised and his antics were enjoyed by enthusiasts of all ages. The new 1:148 scale Oxford VW Beetle is also decorated in Pearl White with silver and black trim. It includes the racing number 53 and comes with the red, white and blue racing stripes, which run the whole length of the centre of the car from front to back. Scania Highline Curtainside - Eddie Stobart Ltd

This newly tooled truck - the first to be produced in N scale - is decorated in the highly popular and collectable Eddie Stobart livery, chosen to launch the Scania Highline tractor unit, pulling a curtainside trailer.

This modern truck in the familiar green, red and white Stobart colours features the name Toni Marie and is registered PF13 NTJ, as run currently. Me163B-O - Major Wolfgang Späte		NEW
AC041	SCALE 1:72 PRICE £13.95

NEW Tooling!

Me163B-O, Major Wolfgang Späte, Erprobungskommando 16, Bad Zwischenahn, 1944

This latest 1:72 scale introduction to the Oxford series of World War II aircraft is a replica of the Messerschmitt Me 163 Komet, which was designed by Alexander Lippisch, manufactured by Messerschmitt and took its first flight in 1941. Used essentially by the Luftwaffe, its initial role was that of interceptor.

The aircraft was unique in that it was a German rocket-powered fighter aircraft and is the only aircraft of its type ever to have been operational. Its design was revolutionary at the time and over 300 of the ME 163 were built, starting with the A version. However, introduced officially in 1944, it proved ineffective as a fighter and modifications were made which resulted in the Me 163B. The upgrade included a fuselage that was more easily produced, wing panel, retractable landing skid and tailwheel designs and a one-piece nose for the forward fuselage. This feature could incorporate a 'windmill' generator at the very front of the nose capable of generating supplementary electrical power whilst in flight. The Me 163B-O was a variation armed with two 20mm MG150/20 cannon.

The Oxford Me 163B is a replica of the bright red aircraft flown by Major Wolfgang Späte, complete with German markings in black and white, including the Swastika on the tail fin. Because of its glider heritage in real life, our aircraft also features the authentic skids used for landing, which could be retracted into the aircraft keel in flight. We have also replicated the wheel configuration that comprised a pair of wheels, each mounted onto the ends of a specially designed cross axle mounted under the landing skid. These were needed due to the weight of the fuel but were also released shortly after take-off. Final detailing on our model includes silver exhaust pipes, wheel hubs and Pilot tube, while propeller spinner and tyres are finished in matt black.

AR98 Forgotten Family Cars: Hundreds of British companies have made cars in the past 150 years. In this publication we look at a couple of dozen forgotten marques, some of which had an important place in the market in their day. Some others might have succeeded, but they abandoned car production, sometimes due to financial problems, or perhaps because the makers had more profitable activities to pursue. Included here are some fascinating tales from our industrial past.
