

Palm Beach philanthropist Bettina Anderson.

Former designer and Palm Beach maven Leon Amar.

Nick Mele and son Johnny in Palm Beach.

SHARP FOCUS

Palm Beach photographer Nick Mele, who grew up among the society set in Newport, Rhode Island, is a natural chronicler of the winter resort town's denizens. Infused with a Wes Anderson-like whimsy, his portraits and lifestyle images provide a level of intimacy only an insider would have. Dip into his charm-soaked Instagram feed (@a.social.life) for a look at why the cognoscenti are calling him a modern-day Slim Aarons.

CLOCKWISE FROM LEFT: Edmond bracelets, from $500 each, Anjou Mini tote, $2,340, and La Plage espadrilles, $585; goyard.com.

FINE PRINT

Devotees of Goyard leather goods now have more to love. The firm's accessories line has expanded to include stackable bracelets, bags in new colorways, and chic espadrilles, all embellished with the label's signature motif—perfect for a breezy weekend away!

PAST PERFECT

Alixé Laughlin's Cabana Vintage brand is a purveyor of clothing in a stylishly specific vein: resort wear from the 1960s and '70s (think riotous caftans and flowy shirt-dresses). Stock up for the winter resort season at the brand's trunk show, January 18 through 26 at Amanda Lindroth's eponymous Palm Beach shop.

RIGHT: Junkanoo shirtdress, $275, and Goombay dress, $260; cabana vintage.com.

PORTRAITS: NICK MELE; GOYARD AND CABANA; PAMELA COOK/STUDIO D