The Martinelli company was established in 1968 in Nozza, Valle Sabbia, province of Brescia, in the North of Italy. The company was founded by Angelo Martinelli, together with his brothers. Since the very beginning, innovation and high quality products have been embedded in the roots of the company within the historic craftsmanship values and in the values of its region. The organisation is now located in Casto, and is still run by the Martinelli family. The love for classic, timeless lines, has not prevented Martinelli from observing the new trends of the interior design world, and dnd by Martinelli was in fact established in 1998, in order to satisfy the needs of the continuously evolving design sector. This division soon became the centre for the development of new ideas, originating from the collaboration with renowned designers.

"dnd® is research and evolution. Experimentation always focused on the future which caters to the design in its pure meaning to get a perfect synthesis between functionality and aesthetics." Vilma Martinelli.

Griff Werk . . . Opening Doors

The Ulm School of Design (HfG) is regarded as the most important international design institute since the Second World War. It was founded in 1953. The former Bauhaus student Max Bill designed the architectural concept. Together with his student, Ernst Moeckel, he designed a handle for the university building in the 1950's. Griff Werk contacted his son Dr. Jakob Bill in 2012 when the university was been renovated and refurbished. This was followed by precise research and intensive development work from the support of the designer Jakob Zumbuhl and Kevin Fries. The specification of the shape of the original was to be precisely retained and, at the same time, the aim was to ensure that the handle also technically meets all 21st century requirements.

Only this lever will carry the signature of Max Bill for authenticity.

Designed by Jette Joop for Griffwerk.
