Cosmopolitan and chic best describe award-winning jeweller, Nadine Aysoy

Knowing how to accessorise properly can save any outfit and London's best dressed are turning to Nadine Aysoy to source those all important finishing touches. The jeweller launched her eponymous brand last year and has quickly become one of London's go-tos for her exquisite jewels, which she transforms into intriguing and timeless designs. It was for these reasons that she recently won the much-coveted 'Editor's Choice Award' for her work.

Aysoy's razor-sharp eye enables her to create irresistible collections of high impact jewellery; classic jewels that, on closer look, transform into something more extravagant, modern and chic. This is a designer who understands her clients, and the consideration that goes into every collection results in sophisticated pieces for grown-ups, designed to last forever by transcending fashion.

She grew up in Antwerp and with diamonds in her DNA; her grandfather, P. N. Ferstenberg, was honored as 'Dean of the Diamond Industry'. It is fitting that her atelier and design team are based at the heart of the diamond industry, where she works to select gemstones and diamonds to bring her designs to life.

With such heritage, it is no surprise that Aysoy has created a unique and versatile collection of jewellery. Inspired by the beauty of nature, there are four core collections: Tsarina, Petite Tsarina, Elle et Lui and Mille et une Feuilles.

Standout pieces include her award-winning ring in the Mille et une Feuilles collection, which features diamond encrusted, golden ivy leaves that gently wrap around the finger, forming a ring across two fingers, and the glamorous and transformable Tsarina collection. A fashion editor favourite, these have delicate diamonds to replicate frosted snow, creating sensational chandelier earrings in pale pink morganite, blue topaz and pink sapphire that can easily transform into a versatile earring stud. The Petite Tsarina offers smaller and more delicate pendants and rings.

Nadine Aysoy jewellery has caught the attention of stylists and has fast become a favourite jeweller for red carpet appearances. Hermione Corfield and Laura Whitmore were both spotted wearing Nadine Aysoy at the EE BAFTAs and fans include Oscar-winning actress Julie Walters.
