

"The drama behind the scenes was juicier than the show's plotline," says a set insider.

KATHERINE AND LAVERNE CAN'T STAND EACH OTHER!

Dueling divas: CBS' legal drama Doubt was pulled off the air after just two episodes, but the show was filled with drama — behind the scenes. Co-stars Laverne Cox, 32, and Katherine Heigl, 38, butted heads. "There was a lot of eye-rolling and raised eyebrows on both of their parts," a set insider tells In Touch. "Laverne is totally over-the-top and super loud. She annoyed Katherine to no end." The feeling was mutual. The Knocked Up star, who is notorious for being difficult to work with, "had this fake smile she used when she didn't like the script or wasn't happy with her wardrobe," says the set insider, adding that Katherine was sometimes late, which infuriated Laverne. "Shade was constantly being thrown. These are two women who just don't mesh well."

BILL PAXTON'S BRAVE SECRET BATTLE

Beloved actor Bill Paxton's death from a stroke at age 61 on Feb. 25 shocked fans, but the star secretly had been battling heart problems for a while. He died after surgery. "Bill tried to downplay the severity, but he actually had two surgeries on his heart — one last year and another very recently," a source says of the actor, best known for Twister, Titanic and TV's Big Love. "He was such an incredibly optimistic man that everyone really believed he'd be thriving after the second surgery." Director Doug Liman — who was set to work with Bill on the upcoming Edge of Tomorrow sequel — has revealed that Bill admitted he was nervous about the operation but promised he'd be "ready to report for duty" in no time. "No one expected this," adds an insider. "Everyone is devastated." Bill leaves behind two children and his wife, Louise Newbury.

"Most people didn't know that Bill had heart issues," says a source.
