Maison Ogé is a neutral-wear concept born in Oakland, CA.

Our first collection, Permutations of the Mundane, comes from the derivative nature of all things, where a modest realignment of what is expected, alters what is perceived. Neither male nor female, it exists as is.

Production

We produce a small number of shirts at a time in Los Angeles, CA. Individually numbered, our shirts are made from 100% organic, American-made cotton interlock. With a double knit construction, each shirt looks and feels just as soft on the inside, as it does on the outside.

Derivatives and Necessary Redundancies

The derivative nature of all things assigns the creator the agency to freely iterate on what already exists, but does it assign ownership?

In protest of a negative response, The Original Centered Pocket T-Shirt features patent-pending technology. PP 00879.001-PA-USD.

Coffee Stained. Poured over with extreme care. ☕

We hand-steep and stain a number of our shirts in brewed coffee grounds to give them a natural, off-white hue. Depending on the desired saturation, steeping times range from 1 to 4 hours. Each shirt is washed prior to and after the staining process.

THE HOUSE THAT BEATRICE BUILT

Our Name. Our Legacy.

The name Maison Ogé (/ˈmay-zon/ /ˈo-jˈai/) honors our founder's grandmother, Beatrice Ogé. She was a life-long seamstress, Haitian community and church activist, and matriarch of the Ogé family.
