GLASS POLISHING PADS HELP EASILY REMOVE HARD WATER STAINS

Glass surfaces should be sparkling clear, so when hard water stains are present a boat just doesn't look its best. While water spots occur when water left sitting evaporates leaving behind mineral deposits and pollutants, hard water tends to leave behind more water spots than soft water. Shurhold Industries shows how to easily remove these water spots on glass with its Buff Magic, Magic Wool Polisher Pad and Magic Wool Hand Pad. To view these tips in action, boat owners can watch the video at <http://shurhold.com/article/clean-n-simple/featured-on-ship-shape-tvquick-tips-with-serious-shine-2/>.

To begin, owners should apply a small amount of Buff Magic with the Magic Wool Hand Pad. This pad is designed to work with Buff Magic. For about 15-30 seconds, users should work the product into a small area of the glass. Excess product can be wiped away with a microfiber towel.

If the glass isn't sparkling, owners can repeat the process until the desired results are achieved. Once everything looks good, users can move onto the next area of the glass panel until every spot has been buffed and wiped.

For bigger glass areas, users can remove water spots with Shurhold's Dual Action Polisher and Magic Wool Polisher Pad. Owners can follow the same steps with the hand pad, moving from area to area. The polisher should be operated on the lowest setting to remove water spots on glass.

Custom-blended from a high-grade bronze metallic wool, Shurhold's Magic Wool Polisher and Hand Pads are similar to steel wool, but much finer and resist rusting. Buff Magic is scientifically formulated with jeweler's rouge to be a metal polish, as well as a buffing and polishing cream. The proprietary abrasives in this compound break down smaller and smaller, effectively creating a compound that can work a finish from very dull to ultra-glossy.
