

A Horse Of My Very Own™

711478 Pech Merle

Limited Quantity of 1900

Dating to more than 25,000 years ago, the cave paintings of Pech Merle in France are one of the oldest representations of horses in art (only slightly younger than the Vogelherd Figurines unearthed in Germany) and were discovered by a group of teenagers exploring the cave system in 1922. Among the various representations of animals and humans depicted on the massive cave walls are a series of "dappled horses" that bear a striking resemblance to appaloosas.