Plus Guide
The Euroseal®

The Euroseal[®] and sterilization.

- Thermosealing is an essential process in order to carry out the sterilization procedure correctly.
 - It is very important to choose the right thermosealing machine so that operations successive to the sealing procedure are not invalidated.
 - The Euroseal[®] has been engineered to guarantee the highest level of safety both during the enveloping and the sealing phases, and to preserve the instruments in a sterile condition for a certain period of time.
 - The Euroseal[®] is the perfect equipment for optimum sterilization processes thanks to its exclusive main features, and is compact, simple to use and wear-resistant.

Practical and adaptable roll holder.

The Euroseal® is very versatile and adjusts to the space available. The special roll holder can be adjusted in height and depth; it can be wall-hung and can also be used in “double roll holder modality” so that different roll sizes are always available and ready for use.

Compact size.

The Euroseal® combines convenience, practicalness and functionality. The equipment only occupies 30 cm of space when the roll holder is detached, and can even be stored on small-sized surfaces or shelves.

Transparent polycarbonate cover.

The Euroseal® enables to seal envelopes and rolls rapidly and easily. The transparent polycarbonate cover enables to observe the roll under the sealing area and therefore errors are avoided and there is no waste of time.

Convenient and spacious work surface.

The Euroseal® has a convenient work surface that makes the sealing process easier, allowing a more comfortable working position.

Resistant and recyclable bodywork.

The Euroseal® has an innovative design and is built with advanced and lightweight materials. The bodywork and the lower casing are totally recyclable, guarantee high resistance to wear, and are built with special attention to the environment.
