A Romance of WONDERLAND

Boston, June 10th.

THIS little diary contains many strange records, but none so strange as that which I shall to-day set down. I am about to do an unheard-of thing. The occasion for it is a circular which I picked up yesterday. This circular is from the Mayor of Tacoma, and it is addressed to young women. The facts are these: Massachusetts has over seventeen thousand more women than men. There are, in fact, seventeen thousand "extras" in this state—matrimonially considered.

MARSHFIELD HOTEL

And I am one of them!

Tacoma, on Puget Sound, has the reputation of being the "City of Destiny." But, in spite of many advantages of climate, commercial facilities and natural beauties, it is short of—women. It desires wives for its enterprising young men. At least, so says the mayor, through the medium of this circular addressed to the women of the East in general, and of Boston in particular. The invitation is given in good faith, and I have concluded to accept

Millions of Buffaloes

ONCE roamed the country now traversed by the . . . . .

NORTHERN PACIFIC RAILROAD

The prairies of North Dakota and the plains of Montana once were black with the huge, slaggy beasts.

The great steel and iron railroad bridge that spans the Missouri river at Bismarck, N. D., marks the very spot where these noble animals forded the river.

The Yellowstone Valley is the heart of the old Sioux Indians Buffalo-hunting-grounds. As the Buffaloes have vanished, so in great part have the Indians. The traveler will now ride for day after day without sight of an Indian, where once they pursued and slaughtered the stampeded Buffaloes.

This noble animal has found a retreat in the

YELLOWSTONE . . .

and to be seen now he must be visited there.

. . . . . PARK

The official photographer of the Northern Pacific Railroad, Mr. F. Jay Haynes, made a winter trip on SNOWSHOES into the very center of the PARK to study the BUFFALO on their winter range and photograph them. Many of them were found, and also large bands of elk and other game animals.

YELLOWSTONE PARK this is interesting in a double sense, first, because of its wonderful scenic phenomena; second, as a home for our game animals, where they are protected by the U. S. Government.

THE FOLLOWING:

"A handsome pamphlet, beautifully bound in colors, entitled 'Wonderland '97' and gotten up on extra heavy paper, has just been issued by the passenger department of the Northern Pacific Railway, being a story of the Northwest and the beauties of the great Yellowstone Park. The book is one of the finest ever added to the railroad literature of the day, is bounteously illustrated and contains accounts of the forests, mountains, fishing, parks, mining interests and general scenery along the line of the Northern Pacific Railway. The frontispiece, a sketch in colors entitled 'A Washington Road,' is a gem in its way."
