

“GIVE IT BACK”
© Ronnie Taheny Feb 2009

Almost human, it's something quite elusive
Like some place where I belong.
And if I looked around to see what's for the taking
I'd never want to give it back.

I've been flying on my own. I've been flying for far too long
It's a habit of a lifetime and I lost where I was coming from.
It's not working for me any longer so I'm turning to you –
Maybe you can bring me back. Hoping you can bring me back.

Almost human, I'll know it when I feel it
Like that place where I belong.
And if I took a breath to see what you'd been giving
I'd never want to give it back.

I've been flying on my own, I've been flying for far too long
It's a habit of a lifetime and I lost where I was coming from.
It's not working for me any longer so I'm turning to you –
Hoping you can bring me back.

I've been fighting all my own fronts
And I know I've pulled myself too thin.
It's this habit of a lifetime, it's got me struggling just to let you in.
I know there would be nothing better than to give everything I have to you.
You wouldn't have to give it back.
You'd never have to give it back.

And if I'm right and this is not all wishful thinking
And if you stuck around long enough I know you'd finally reach me
And if you gave me another try, there's something you'd teach me –
I'd never want to give you back.
I'd learn enough to never give you back.
