nordic design · african tradition

Mumutane designs unique, graphical and colourful high-quality home accessories. The products are made with African wax print textiles, purchased by women who run small, local textiles shops in Africa, as well as leftover textiles from the well-established international brand Kvadrat.

The aim is to create 'products with purpose', which is why Mumutane has a sustainable approach with a focus on minimising textile waste, and production with a local and social impact tailoring business in Denmark.

The name Mumutane means 'we humans' and the philosophy behind is that we work across cultures and borders to create better conditions for more people.

Mumutane - nordic design african tradition is inspired by the minimalistic Nordic aesthetics and vibrant African expression. The African prints contain a lot of symbols and tales of life in Africa, which gives every product a special story. This cultural crossover adds a personal design experience to any modern home.

Welcome to Mumutane's universe with lots of colours and spectacular prints!

Wax print

The iconic textile

Mumutane's products are designed and made of African wax print textiles, which have a very special status in Africa and among Africans all over the world. In fact, this fabric is considered to be the most symbolic of all African fabrics, nor is it without reason that the fabric is so popular and has been so for almost 200 years.

The wax print fabric is very eye-catching with its clear vibrant colours and distinctive prints and symbols. The textile is made of cotton and is printed using wax, hence the name 'wax print'. The waxing technique helps to evoke a very special visual expression, which is a combination of clear graphics, colours in many layers and a special marbled effect. This combination helps to give a special visual dimension and optical effect in the print. The wax technique makes both the print a little different from print to print, and the colours are very durable and remain beautiful and clear even after long-term use.

Wax print textile is not only beautiful and fascinating to look at, it is full of symbols and stories, which makes it something very special. Both the symbols and the colours reflect the African culture and are used to signal different statements, messages and moods. It can be anything from everyday events, the relationship between men and women, nature, music, rhythms and social status to special traditions and events. The symbolism can vary depending on geography or social status. Many of the popular textiles have been given names over time and are produced in different colour combinations.

Cushions with a message

Mumutane peacock collection / A symbol of awakening, freedom and renewal

The wax print fabrics carry messages and there are many of them! Depending on the geographical area and social status, the symbols may have different meanings. In this way the symbolism makes the wax print textiles both fascinating, mysterious and powerful.

The team behind Mumutane

Mumutane - nordic design african tradition is founded in 2018. We want to show that Africa has something very special and interesting to offer. The continent is set to become the next major trendsetting player in fashion and design. We will show how two different design traditions can use and amplify each other and create something different and unique. Mumutane's concept focuses on sustainability, social responsibility and fair conditions for all. The collection is built around materials being purchased from small businesses in Africa to support local development as well as leftover textiles from Kvadrat. We are inspired by the 'give work' philosophy which is why the products are produced locally by a social impact tailoring business in Denmark.

All prints are limited in number, but we are adding new prints during the season, so we have a huge selection of different prints and colours.

Please, do not hesitate to reach out for more information and see our latest designs and beautiful design cushions.

All the best

Maria & Line
