Amid the collective hum of uncertainty around Brexit, Britain is a bizarre place to be in 2019. Spanning past and present tense, UK photographers from across the generations search their archives for moments that, to them, tap into this surreal time

"This photo was taken for a story with Heathermary Jackson called Jumping Jack. It was shot just off Caledonian Road in 1999"
Elaine Constantine (1999)

REAL BRITANNIA

"This photograph was taken for my first exhibition, with Maureen Paley, at a pub I walked past every day on my way into work. It was perfect"
Hannah Starkey (1998)

"This was taken at an estate in Newham before it was threatened with demolition to make way for the Olympic village"
Ewen Spencer (Newham, 2008)
