WHAT GEAR DO YOU RECOMMEND?

Our Top 6 Gear Recs

The most important part of car camping is your sleeping arrangement. Without it, your adventure can turn into sleepless nights and all day back pain.

1. Luno Air Mattress

Turn the back of your car into a comfortable bed in minutes with the Luno Camping Air Mattress.

2. Nemo Sleeping Bag

In the summertime, 40-degree sleeping bags generally work well. In colder temperatures, invest in a 0-20 degree sleeping bag.

3. Camping Pillow

Skip bringing your pillow from home and bring a compact travel pillow instead.

4. Collapsible Solar Lantern

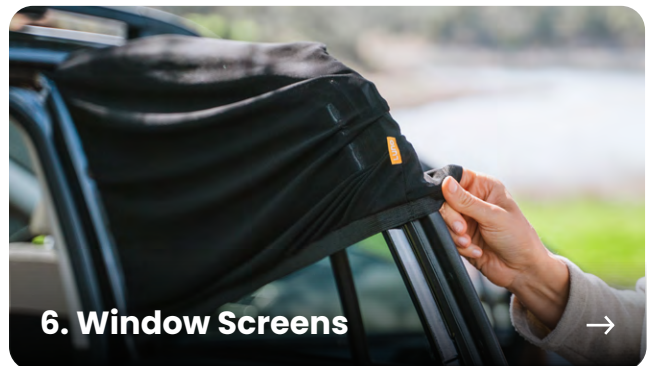

The Crush Light Chroma Collapsible Solar Lantern is waterproof, collapsible, and can last up to 35 hours.

5. Seatback Organizer

The Seatback Organizer has designated zones for all of your travel & camp essentials.

6. Window Screens

Enjoy the crisp, cool evening air with plenty of privacy and none of the bugs.

HOW DO I FIND WHERE TO CAMP?

Top 5 Campsite Resources

1. HipCamp

Online booking platform where campers, glampers, RVers, and outdoor enthusiasts can find unique outdoor stays on private land.

2. Freecampsites.net

If you're looking for a free place to car camp, check out freecampsites.net. The interface isn't remotely modern, but the user-generated dataset is enormous and consists of thousands of campsites.

3. The Dyrt PRO

If you're a road trip regular, we recommend The Dyrt PRO. For less than a tank of gas, you'll get access to downloadable BLM and Forest Service maps. The Dyrt PRO also offers maps of cell service—a must for remote workers operating off hot spots—and road trip maps to help you find great campsites along your route.

4. iOverlander

Desktop-friendly maps are helpful when you're at home and planning your route, but it's key to have a mobile solution when it's late and you're looking for a place to crash. We like iOverlander, which also consists of user-generated campsites, parking spots, and reviews.

HOW DO I OFFSET THE CARBON FOR MY TRIPS?

Buy Road Trip Carbon Credits

Let's face it - unless you have a fancy EV whip, driving creates emissions and that creates carbon and carbon has a negative impact on the environment. Thankfully there are some really great organizations we've partnered with to offset the carbon impact of driving. By using our carbon offset tool, you can actually make your trip carbon positive to ensure this planet is getting more than we are taking.
