

Hawn and the Indian jeweller

Mid Day 14 Apr 2017

AT some point or the other, Name, is sure to come up in matters concerning Indian success in LA. The blithe star known for her cosmic giggle is a great and known India lover. Spiritualists, yoga exponents, Indian philanthropists and ashrams, have all been part of her circle. We too have our own Goldie Hawn story. A rather bizarre one, in which the lovely star's exit from a Delhi hotel was made possible thanks to the timely intervention of our credit card, but that's a story for another day. This weekend, jewellery designer

The Nefertiti necklace designed for (inset) Goldie Hawn.

Whose CV features London, Sydney and LA, displayed a replica of a one-of-a-kind necklace he had once made for Hawn called Nefertiti at his birthday party at a SoBo eatery. One of the highlights of the evening, he says, was the Martini that he created, in tribute to the staggering sale of the legendary Pink Star diamond earlier this month in an auction in Hong Kong. The evening was not without its touch of camp. The birthday boy had worn a

Payal Kilachand and Pavan Anand

Samurai belt created for him by a designer friend. "I accessorised it with a knuckle duster in 18K and a two head dragon ring with Burmese rubies and solitaires," he said. The cake, meanwhile, was also in the shape of the green emerald necklace he's designed for Goldie Hawn.