Colour Coded

Being able to differentiate between the intended uses of certain pieces of equipment is a vital means of preventing cross-contamination, which can impact hugely upon quality, health and safety. Knives and chopping boards are among the most common pieces of equipment which need to be colour coded.

Available in six colours each of which corresponds to a certain type of food stuff:
White - Bakery and Dairy, Red - Raw meat, Yellow - Cooked meat,
Green - Fruit and salad, Brown - Vegetables, Blue - Raw Fish.

Equipment

Whether you're refrigerating ingredients, cooking meals, or updating your food prep area, you'll need restaurant equipment items that serve as the backbone to your commercial kitchen. Our restaurant equipment supply category contains a variety of brands, and price points, so every operator can find exactly what they need to outfit their kitchen needs.

The True GDM-41-HC-LD two-section glass door merchandiser uses environmentally friendly R290 hydrocarbon refrigerant to keep temperatures cool. For holding refrigerated packaged and bottled products, the refrigeration system maintains even temperatures from 33 to 38 degrees Fahrenheit. Energy consumption and heat production are reduced because the evaporator and condenser fan motors create a consistent volume of air. Maintaining the condensing unit is convenient because it is mounted on the bottom of the cabinet, and the entire cabinet is foamed in place with polyurethane insulation to prevent ambient air from entering the cabinet.

Great for medium-volume applications, the Vulcan LG300 commercial gas fryer has a 35- to 40-pound oil capacity, while its frypot has a 14-inch by 14-inch cooking area and is made of durable stainless steel. A large cold zone underneath the fryer baskets helps the unit cook fresh-tasting food by keeping food sediment from burning and affecting the taste of the oil between oil changes or filterings. An oversized, 1 1/4-inch full-port drain empties the oil quickly and thoroughly to ensure changing it is convenient, reducing downtime and minimizing labor involvement.
