Siberian ginseng is an adaptogen, traditionally used to support the whole body during periods of emotional stress. It helps boost energy levels and is considered by some to be an overall body supplement. Licorice root is an adaptogen, and has long been used by traditional herbalists as a general supplement for respiratory, liver and glandular support. Licorice contains triterpenoid saponins, flavonoids, isoflavonoids, magnesium, silicon, sodium and other beneficial constituents.

Ginkgo leaf extract is believed to help maintain memory with age and to support healthy cognitive function. It is one of the most popular selling herbs and is also thought to improve circulation.
