WOOD-AGEING AGENT

Vintage Effects

- A photograph showing a wooden wall with vertical planks. In the foreground, there are several glass jars containing liquids of various colors (dark red, orange, brown) and a small bowl. A white lampshade is visible on the left. The scene suggests a workshop or laboratory setting for testing wood ageing agents.
- Reactive stain
  - Wood floors and panelling
  - Reacts with the wood grain

To easily age and patinate all wood floors and panelling, brings out the wood grain.

The more the grain pattern is visible, the more the "aged" effect will be. The most stunning effects are obtained on wood which has been previously brushed in the direction of the wood grain or distressed before application using various methods (small impacts, thin scratches, etc.).

3 examples on brushed oak:

Wood-ageing agent Distressed oak + Hard Waxoil Light grey

Wood-ageing agent Platinum + Hard Waxoil White grey

Wood-ageing agent Wenge + Hard Waxoil White

Alpine beige
