● Hippie moms are the coolest. If you're lucky enough to have one, you can bond over how great the fashion was back in the heady '60s, and maybe even one day start a fashion line with them. Such is the case with London-based Zoe Graham and her mum, Gina Stobart Graham. Currently a design student at Kingston University, Zoe grew up admiring her mom's intricate drawings, until one day about three years ago, she decided they would make pretty damn cool style statements. Hence, Jervoise, a line of vintage jean jackets and vests embroidered with mystical and colorful tapestries. "She is very open to anything," Zoe says of her mother. "We did some darker designs, which I wanted to be a bit Gothic. She came back with birds eating eyes, and drops of blood!" The goods are a hit with stylish U.K. bands, including One Night Only, Marina and the Diamonds, and Darling Buds (of which Graham's boyfriend, actor Jamie Campbell Bower, is a member). Who knew needlepoint could be so rock 'n' roll? STEPHANIE TRONG

■ Back in the '80s, an adolescent Brooke Shields uttered the famous words, "Nothing comes between me and my Calvins." Well, with the launch of Calvin Klein Jeans Body, nothing has to-see-ing as how the new pants do double duty as shaping undergarments. Engineered with figure-defining and slimming features such as a curved back that sits slightly lower on the hip and tilts to define shape in the rear, an inserted waistband that lessens the chance of gapping, and a longer hem that lengthens the leg, the jeans work miracles. They come in a classic skinny cut, as well as two washes—copper rinse and rusted iron—which will be sold on the label's new e-commerce website. With jeans that fit so snugly, Shields would totally approve. RAJNI LUCIENNE JACQUES
