

NEW FOR HIM

Endometriosis – why is it my concern as a man?

Women with endometriosis, uterine prolapse, after hysterectomy or with myoma sometimes have bleeding or pain during sex.

The medical name for this problem is collision dyspareunia. Despite a variety of causes, there is a simple solution: The new Bumpi Rings.

Depending on your needs, one or more of the soft rings can be slipped over the penis to prevent too deep penetration. The result: pain-free sex, no more anxiety about injuries and finally relaxed, fulfilling sexuality for both partners. Using the Bumpi® ring is simple, quick and does not interfere with lovemaking. Also, there is no risk of the Bumpi® rings slipping inside the partner.

In addition, the Bumpi® rings are skin-friendly, soft and flexible, durable and reusable. They are compatible with water-soluble lubricants, silicone oil, skin creams, vegetable fats, with latex and polyisoprene condoms and of course free of latex, phthalate, bisphenol-A and silicone.

Bumpi®
Rings

Soft for him.
Painless for her.

Medintim

One or more soft Bumpi® rings are stretched with two hands and pulled up to the penis shaft directly in front of the testicles before penetration. Depending on the number of Bumpi® rings used, the depth of penetration can be individually adjusted. To pull off, the rings are also stretched again and can thus be removed.
