Printed Tights

Pamela Mann have been producing printed tights for decades and the demand and popularity is ever increasing. The advantage of printed tights is that designs can be created quickly and easily to follow the latest trends.

How does it work?

A design is created as a digital file. This is transferred onto print paper using special ink. Next a flat bed heat press is used to transfer the ink from the paper onto the tights, at 185 degrees.

This print method is called digital sublimation printing. This specific combination of heat, time and pressure enables the inks to penetrate the fabric so that a permanent, full colour image is formed. We chose this method because it allows the colour to be absorbed into the tights resulting in a colourful, long lasting design that is resistant to scratching.

In 2019 we invested in a specialist machine that allows us to print any unique design onto our tights. Therefore we can supply completely bespoke products to our customers. Be as daring as you like and showcase your individuality!

If you are interested in bespoke printed tights or socks please get in touch with us at marketing@pamelamann.co.uk and we will be happy to help you.

TATTOO STYLE

Our tattoo style prints are produced with the same method as our all over designs, the difference is that these are printed onto sheer tights to give the illusion of a tattoo. Far less painful than the real thing!

A woman is sitting on a white, ornate chair with a fringed lace blanket. She is wearing a dark green dress and festive tights with a floral pattern of red flowers and green leaves on a dark background. She is also wearing bright red high-heeled shoes. To her left is a large, dark brown statue of a lion wearing a gold crown. The background is a simple wall and a wooden floor.
