"I believe in furniture that becomes indispensable without making too much noise," says Mario Ruiz. Indeed, that's often what the best industrial designers do, and Ruiz is no exception. After obtaining his degree in industrial design from Barcelona's prestigious Elisava Design School, the multi-awarded Spanish talent has gone on to develop commercial furniture, lighting, textiles, and more, all of which showcase a thoughtfully simple aesthetic.

Now, Ruiz joins a slew of modern designers in creating a line of outdoor furniture for RH, whose stable of talents includes the likes of Harrison and Nicholas Condos, Barlas Baylar, and David Sutherland. Ruiz's line, called Paloma, is an assortment of chiseled, stately offerings in aluminum and solid teak.
