Martin Brudnizki Design Studio

London and New York

The suave Brudnizki's creative philosophy is simple: "Context, culture, and the client—the end result needs to be a response to how they want to live." Lucky for the Stockholm-born interior architect and designer, those admirers, from privacy-conscious financial types to hospitality powerhouses such as Soho House, Rosewood Hotels & Resorts, and The Birley Group, appreciate high style goosed with a significant dose of irreverent maximalism. His eye-popping 2018 revamp of Annabel's, the legendarily louche London private club, features a disco with columns shaped like golden palm trees, a mirrored ladies lounge where the ceiling is blanketed with pink artificial peonies, and more trelliswork than at Château de Versailles. "We treat every project as a collaboration, ensuring we don't enforce a house style," avers Brudnizki. mbds.com
