

HOME & DESIGN

THINK
spring

*fresh styles
for the season*

FURNITURE MUST-HAVES
New Collections

LUSCIOUS LANDSCAPES
The Great Outdoors

DISPLAY UNTIL MAY 1, 2018
SPRING $5.95US

04>

0 74851 08925 5

In the master bath (this page), Burns combined a rustic, tumbled-slate floor with expanses of elegant marble in the shower enclosure and on the walls and vanity. The soaking tub by MTI offers a window view. The chandelier above it is from Urban Electric.

How did you choose the furnishings?

Part of what made this project work so well was the amount of customization we were able to do. All the furniture is custom-measured so it fits the spaces perfectly. The fabrics are beautiful linen or linen-and-cotton blends, but we used stain-resistant Perennials indoor-outdoor fabric on the Lillian August dining chairs and Schumacher performance linen on the Lee Industries sofa.

What are the highlights of the master bath?

We paired heated, tumbled-slate floors with marble surfaces. For an MTI soaking tub in the window niche, we used plumbing fixtures by Newport Brass. The double vanity features Kohler sinks and a beautiful Valley Gold marble countertop from Marble Systems. I really pushed for a curb-less shower, which looks so clean. The shower has Calacatta Chablis marble tiles from Architectural Ceramics and a marble floating bench.

“I love this house because it feels like it’s been here a long time.” —ERICA BURNS

How did you select the art?

The art and rugs bring color into the interiors. Mindy had art from her family and we also commissioned some. The painting over the mantel is by Michelle Armas in Atlanta. We sent her a piece of wallpaper Mindy loved and she created the art based on that. The modern piece in Mindy’s home office was commissioned from Kayce Hughes.

Can you name a favorite design element in the house?

The window treatments by Gretchen Everett are beautiful—custom pleated and cross-stitched. It’s those subtle details that make the difference. I love this house because it feels like it’s been here a long time. It’s the combination of architecture, materials, furnishings. It’s homey. ■ kitchen accent wall—add warmth to the cool, contemporary look and crisp, white palette. “Though we mostly wanted a calming, all-white house,” Schriever explains, “we also wanted to retain a hint of the historic row house.”

Jones, who also designed the interiors, completed the furniture layout during the schematic phase. “I like to ensure how a space will function with furniture from the start, taking into account what homeowners own and what they might need,” he explains. He and his clients selected pieces in a range of price points—and in a comfortable, chic and minimalist style inspired by the clean Mid-Century Modern vibe that Schriever and Palmieri favor.

“The kitchen and family room are our daily hangouts, so we chose durable, practical pieces, like the plastic Drop chairs in the eating area,” says Schriever. “The front of the house is more adult. There, we sourced interesting, sophisticated pieces like the Mayor sofa.”

The couple chose other iconic modern pieces as well, such as the whimsical Wegner cowhide chair by the fireplace and the acrylic Philippe Starck Ghost chairs in the dining area, which keep the views open to back of the house. The Mitchell Gold + Bob Williams ottoman/coffee table in the living room is upholstered in child-proof Perennials fabric.

Jones designed a drywall “headboard” in the master bedroom (above), framed by strips of exposed brick; a Womb chair and ottoman by Eero Saarinen create a reading nook. In the master bath (opposite), a brick accent wall is the backdrop for a vessel tub from Signature Hardware. Double vanities from Ikea are paired with Duravit drop-in sinks.

The palette is mostly neutral, with color coming from the couple’s extensive collection of contemporary art. Stylish, strategically placed light fixtures bring spatial definition to the open-plan space, with a linear LED fixture above the island and pendants defining both the dining and eat-in areas. Recessed LEDs throughout the house provide overall lighting when needed.

The couple are thrilled with the finished home. “It’s extremely livable and comfortable,” Schriever says. “We love how everything turned out.” ■

SOURCES OF NOTE

Coffee Table in Living Area & Loveseat in Kids’ Room: mgbw.com. GE Monogram Refrigerator in Kitchen: adu.com. Kitchen Countertop & Backsplash: caesarstoneus.com. Floor in Master Bath: daltile.com. For before photos and a complete list of sources, see homeanddesign.com.