

2018's Top Doctors 554 OF THE SHARPEST MINDS IN MEDICINE

San Francisco

IN MEMORIAM
Mayor Ed Lee
His Life, His Legacy.
PAGE 2

SERENITY NOW

How to find happiness while the world is falling to pieces.
An 81-person group therapy session.

BODY AND MIND ISSUE

A DOCTOR WAGES WAR AGAINST STROKES

THE ROCK STAR
SCIENTIST WITH A
GOD COMPLEX

RENOVATION

colorful and playful aesthetic—as well as someone who truly understood the meaning of “family-friendly.” “Once we started talking to Martha Angus and Katie McCaffrey,” Burke Harris says, “I was like, done and done.”

The feeling was mutual. Angus was immediately impressed with the artwork the Harrises had in their burgeoning collection, especially a neon piece by Tim Etchells in their kitchen that reads, “Please come back I am sorry about what happened before.” (“Every married couple needs to have a sign like this,” Burke Harris says. “We can just turn it on and say, ‘We’re good, right?’”)

“When I saw that, my head flew off,” Angus remembers. McCaffrey adds, “That’s what made us identify with them right off the bat. Everything was gutsy and cheeky.” It didn’t hurt that Angus and her firm had worked closely and harmoniously with Mann on numerous projects over the years.

SO WITH THE DREAM team in place and baby boy number four on the way, they got to work. Mann, who had completed the couple’s top-floor master bedroom renovation a few years back, now turned his attention to the primary living spaces on the main floor and a dark, low-ceilinged basement level that could be accessed only via a squirrely set of stairs.

“We wanted to respect the traditional forms of the architecture while inserting some modern, contemporary elements,” says Mann, who feels that the changes they made, such as the revamped fireplace and built-ins in the living room, “look inevitable.” The most dramatic transformations

Above: The sofas in the living room are upholstered in Perennials fabric to withstand even the biggest of messes.
Left: Arno Harris, Nadine Burke Harris, and their two youngest sons.
Right: Neon artwork by Tim Etchells doubles as a marital mess culpa.

PHOTO LEFT: CHRISTOPHER HICKS