Family

For generations the Vanelli family has owned two marble quarries in the Carrara area of Paonazzo, Bardiglio and Statuario. Fiammetta Vanelli is the female heir of this extraordinary heritage, the feminine declination of a long family tradition.

The history of Vanelli family's marble begins in 1818, when Duchess Maria Beatrice d'Este authorized the extraction of the white marble of Carrara. Since the 19th century, the Vanelli family quarry has supplied marble for the construction of public works in the most important European capitals.

In 1936, Aldo Vanelli, Fiammetta's grandfather, purchased the quarry nr. 67, called Zona Mossa, which today gives its name to the jewelry collection. In 2011, the family also acquired another quarry: nr. 66 Poggio Silvestre.

Since 1818, the means of marble production have changed. Nowadays, robotics and the latest technologies allow endless cutting solutions. Today, it is possible to create complex works and special projects in less time and, above all, in a practical and safe way.
