

DRS JANE AND KATHERINE MULROONEY

Co-founder of the Dr Mulrooney Clinic specialising in cosmetic dermatology

I'm older than Katherine by two-and-a-half years and at school we had different friends and different interests. Katherine was sports obsessed and spent all her spare time playing tennis and hockey, whereas I was more academic and preferred reading and socialising.

Things changed when we both went to study medicine at NUI Galway, and from then on we pretty much saw each other every day. After finishing college, we both knew that we wanted to pursue a career in dermatology, so that meant we spent even more time together and became especially close while studying at St Thomas' Hospital in London.

Since then we have worked together both clinically as cosmetic doctors at the Dr Mulrooney Clinic and also in our family business, Seavite.

I don't feel we are rivals in anything. Frankly, we're too busy for that. But we are also very different, and that helps. Katherine is more creative and I am more
