Chilote Shoes

SLOW CRAFTED IN PATAGONIA

Our positive impact wool slippers are hand crafted in Patagonia through a coop system of ethical production. There is no factory so each pair is made “slow” with care and pride by independent artisan women doing what they know & love – knitting from home.

The slippers are crafted with locally sourced renewable materials including raw sheep wool and a variety of responsibly tanned leathers from local farms.

Chilote Shoes are Climate+Positive and B Corp. certified meaning that they are not just warm and comfortable but probably the smartest slippers you will ever wear.

The purchase of each pair directly empowers communities to maintain their unique craft and heritage in Patagonia.
