Curriculum : Parenting the Love and Logic Way

The most important outcome of parenting is to give our kids self-esteem. Self-esteem prepares our kids to take on life challenges and have rewarding relationships. We want our kids to have happy, successful lives, right? Love and Logic provides simple skills to raise happy, responsible, respectful children and build lasting relationships of love between parent and child. Parenting is the most difficult job there is. While it sounds cliché, it is true. Love and Logic is a guide to make the parenting experience enjoyable for both parent and child. I facilitate the Love and Logic curriculum, and sometimes in my private practice I teach the principles to my clients for other interpersonal relationships as well, between partners, between adult children and parents, between co-workers and friends. Its great stuff!

Curriculum : Parenting the Love and Logic Way

Krista Cassell is a Board Certified Biblical Counselor (BCBC) and Board Certified Christian Life Coach (BCLC) who graduated from Light University with a Masters diploma in Biblical Counseling, specializing in adolescents . She received her Board Certification in both counseling and coaching through the American Association of Christian Counselors. Although Krista counsels and coaches families and individuals in all walks of life, she is most passionate about working with hurting families struggling with difficult relationship and behavioral issues. Her passion developed through her personal experience within her own family. Having a child with a mis-diagnosed neurobiological disorder for many years, she has a heartfelt interest in helping families who share the same struggles and want to seek restoration and healing. Krista is trained in the Love and Logic parenting curriculum, which provides practical tools and techniques that help adults achieve respectful, healthy relationships with their children. Kristas experience includes nearly 10 years as a lay pastoral counselor in her role as a small group leader in her church, and 4 years of inner-city youth ministry in the Franklinton area of Columbus, OH. This real life experience provides her with a depth of understanding and compassion for those struggling with spiritual issues.

Heather Snyder earned her teaching degree in Elementary Education, her Master's degree in Curriculum and Instruction and has obtained level of Master Teacher for the state of Ohio. Currently teaching Kindergarten in Cleveland, Heather is also a part-time college instructor at Cleveland State University. She was trained in using Love and Logic when her oldest son was in kindergarten (2004). After seeing the many positive effects in her home, Heather fell in love with the program and quickly began using the techniques in her K-8 classrooms. In an effort to further the impact she was having, she became a trainer for the 9 Essential Skills of the Love and Logic Classroom. Heather continues to serve local educators by offering professional development to schools, speaking to parent groups and by opening her classroom door to see Love and Logic at work.
