Why Is High Blood Pressure Known As the “Silent Killer”?

Anyone who has survived a heart attack or stroke due to high blood pressure can tell you that it “just happens,” suddenly, without warning. You can feel entirely normal on any given day and then a sudden heart attack or stroke can leave you with at best a long hospital visit and at worst, as is unfortunately the case for many, death.

90% of people have hypertension by age 65.

Anybody is at risk, but those with a family history of high blood pressure are especially at risk.

In addition to heart attacks and strokes, research also shows that high blood pressure contributes to:

- Fatigue
- Kidney failure
- Hair Loss
- Impotence
- Memory problems
- Chronic inflammation

This is why it's of the utmost importance to keep your blood pressure in a healthy range. Individuals and their families can simply live much healthier and happier lives when healthy blood pressure is a priority.
