Business update – Essential Business

Brian Watson, Chief Executive Officer of Blis Technologies (NZX:BLT), has confirmed Blis Technologies will remain operational following the Government overnight raising the national COVID-19 response to Level 4. Blis Technologies manufacturing and elements of its scientific services are classified as “essential services”. The company has completed the MPI registration process to maintain that status, and subject to that, they will continue operating.

As manufacturers of unique probiotics that support immunity, Blis Technologies is an important supplier to consumers in NZ through pharmacies and online sales. Essential functions at Blis Technologies will remain operational during the COVID-19 Level 4 period to ensure BLIS Probiotics can continue to be supplied to support immunity and throat health of thousands of New Zealanders during a time of high need and into the winter cold and flu season.

Blis Technologies is committed to delivering services in accordance with the Government’s guidance to protect the health and wellbeing of all New Zealanders. Staff that do not have a critical role in manufacture or testing are working from home. Workplace segregation, social distancing and sanitisation protocols are fully implemented at both our sites.

We are working closely with our suppliers to ensure continuity of supply.
