Overview

Employees are the eyes and ears of any organisation. Whistleblowing arrangements are a vital component of good governance and risk management.

Whistleblowing is often misunderstood yet an essential aspect of the modern working environment. It safeguards the organisation, yourself and others that you work with. It should not be taken lightly.

A whistleblowing policy should now be part of organisational policies and procedures. Having an understanding of what to do is extremely important.

This course contains the following modules:

Module 1 - An introduction to whistleblowing. - In this module you will look at the difference between whistleblowing and leaking confidential information, understanding and qualifying and protective disclosures, raising concerns at work and outside of work and protection for whistle-blowers.
