Acknowledgments

What would an author/editor be without a publishing company? A great many thanks go to the folks at Chalice Press—Trent Butler, Lynne Letchworth, Pam Brown, Elizabeth Wright, and Gail Stobaugh. It is a wonderful group of positive and appreciative people. (And thanks to Sandy Dixon, who started all this years ago by making a book proposal sound so easy!)

The biggest help came from my computer-whiz husband, Tim. If it were not for his “black box” that converted the 950-plus text files into a spreadsheet and database I could work with, I would still be typing in hymns to this day! Thank you, dear.

Thanks also to Rev. Steve Workman and Althea Alton for letting me bounce ideas off of them, and to the friends I work with at Western Illinois University for putting up with my stress, excitement, bloodshot eyes, and walking comas—Kevin Markham, Brenda Parks, Sue Thorman, and Lisa Hinman. Life should have returned to normal by now...

A note to the congregation of Frederick Christian Church: Thank you for your continued inspiration to uncover God’s “mysterious ways.” You are a great bunch.

Introduction

This project stemmed from my desire to find hymns that tied in with my sermons. The organization of the Chalice Hymnal (Chalice Press, 1995) is great; the topical index is great. Yet nothing helped me get right down to a specific word. I became fairly adept at flipping through and scanning the hymnal, but it was time consuming, and I could have missed something. I have compiled this resource to help you, the worship planner or curious observer, find materials quickly and down to the word without memorizing every line of the hymnal and Chalice Praise (Chalice Press, 2003).

There are two concordances—one for the English worship materials and one for the non-English worship materials. The latter contains mostly Spanish words, but includes other languages as well. Only when an entire verse is non-English is it included there. Advent/Birth hymns, for example, contain the phrase “gloria in excelsis,” but those words are included in the English concordance.

Each concordance lists a word or phrase followed by letters and numbers. The H and P directly below the word stand for hymnal and praise book, respectively. Not all congregations have both, so I felt it necessary to separate them. Next to those letters are the selection numbers for that specific book.

Easy so far? Now comes the tricky part. Following the number is a one- or two-character code to tell you what it is. A “Notes to the Legend” page follows this Introduction and explains what these codes represent, along with the criteria I used to assign them. The codes stand for: affirmation of faith, benediction, call-response, call to worship, hymn, meditation, praise response, prayer, responsive reading, scripture, song, and welcome. When you are looking for a hymn, don’t choose a number followed by “cw.” That is a call to worship, not a hymn! These codes help you decide what to and what not to look into further in the hymnal and praise book.

I have also included numeric lists of the hymnal and praise book materials. These lists give the number and title so you don’t have to constantly flip to the other books, and they provide places for you to record the dates the selection was used. This should help point out those materials that are “underused” as well as those overused!

That covers the basics, but you might have some of the following questions.

Why isn’t every word in the hymnal and praise book listed here?

Although this was an exhausting concordance, it is not exhaustive. I saw no reason to list every occurrence of “the” and “to.” If words occurred so frequently (huge lists) that you wouldn’t even begin to look up the references, I possibly omitted those. This applies to uneventful verbs, adverbs, and pronouns (e.g., “done,” “like,” “become,” “they,” and “we”), but not all. Words similar to these could have been left in if they were on the fence and there was room for them.

Couldn't you include the phrase where the word occurs, as in some Bible concordances?

My first attempt was to list the word with the hymn title and corresponding phrase. I ended up with a 2000-page document that would have cost a few hundred bucks. The wise ones at Chalice Press decided this was not cost effective for them nor affordable for most ministers! I also realized that although the phrase helped put it into context, you would still have to refer to the selection in the hymnal or praise book to get the whole picture.

A concordance is designed to show only where words occur, but I was able to attach codes to the numbers to help you screen the references. The legend at the bottom of each page provides a handy refresher until you are familiar with the codes. This format provides the most information in the least amount of space, while still giving you more than simply where. However, also knowing the title might trigger an idea. I have included lists of the numbers and titles for both of the books following the concordances.

What about the old-time words like "thee," "thine," and "thy"?

These words are archaic forms of "you," "yours," and "your" and usually refer to God. The more common forms are not included, so neither are these. The references to these alone were quite prolific.

What about the words with old-time endings like "didst" and "canst"?

These words are also archaic forms of familiar or common words. If the more common word didn't make the cut, neither did its counterpart. This also applies to words with dropped syllables and letters ("Bless'd," "Calv'ry," "neath"). If they are significant enough to be included, they are referenced under the expanded word.

What if a word has more than one meaning?

I tried to split the words with larger reference lists into categories by their function—noun, adjective, verb, adverb—and included that in parentheses following the word. Some of them were close calls, so I apologize for not paying better attention in English class! If the list wasn't very long, I have not always taken the extra space to split them into different entries. If a noun had more than one meaning, I tried to differentiate the entries with clues in parentheses. Hopefully, these breakdowns will reduce the selections you have to look up.

Why are some words capitalized and some not, when they are the same?

The words that are capitalized usually refer in some way to God or Jesus. However, composers and lyricists are not consistent! Many descriptors for God and Jesus are not capitalized. Most often, the difference is in the adjective; capitals convey a title, lowercase letters carry less weight. I tried to list the words and phrases as they occurred in the books rather than interpreting the intent on my own.

How did you determine a “phrase”? Why not list only single words?

I started off with single entries in mind until I saw the number of references to God, Jesus, holy, love, praise, etc. It would have been easier to list the hymns and songs that did not include these words! To qualify a word, I found short or common phrases, or grabbed surrounding words, and created separate entries. These are usually words with their adjective, such as “Holy Spirit,” or combinations of words, such as “wisdom and strength.” It is surprising to see just how common some of these phrases are. If the phrase captures that word, I did not include it in the main entry, unless that word also occurred separately. These additional entries reduced those huge lists and gave you a bit of context. When you are looking for something specific, first check below the main entry to see if it is broken out there. Also, multiple-word entries are split and flipped and listed more than once (e.g., “eternal life” and “life, eternal,” “glory to God” and “God, glory to”).

Have I made mistakes and overlooked some words? Sure. But as someone at Chalice Press told me, “We strive for excellence, not perfection.” If it’s good enough for them, it’s good enough for me! I hope you will find this reference tool useful in your quest to become more familiar with these two Disciple worship resources. I know that I have!

Happy hunting!

Sue

Notes to the Legend

a	affirmation	text	An affirmation of faith found in that section of the hymnal.
b	benediction	text	A prayer of departure for use at the close of the service.
cr	call-response	music/text	A music response (sung phrase) alternated with a responsive reading. It could be from hymnal pages 728–768, based on the Psalms, or throughout the hymnal based on other scriptures.
cw	call to worship	text	A prayer of praise used at the beginning of the worship service.
h	hymn	music	A music selection that has at least two repeated but different verses and “looks like” a hymn. It is not too hard to follow musically and would be a primary music selection in the service.
m	meditation	text	A quote, interpretation, comment, thought, etc. of someone noteworthy. “Something to think about.”
pr	praise response	music	A short music selection of sixteen measures or less that usually has one line or theme.
p	prayer	text	A prayer by someone noteworthy.
rr	responsive reading	text	A litany or reading that alternates between the leader and the people.
sc	scripture	text	A section from the Bible that is included at a relevant place in the hymnal.
s	song	music	A music selection that isn’t as long or storylike in comparison with a hymn. It is usually made up of only one or two verses, but more than sixteen measures, and may not take long to sing. Most of the selections in Chalice Praise are songs, so this guideline applies mainly to Chalice Hymnal .
w	welcome	text	A statement to welcome someone into the church family.
