CARE & CLEANING

Take caution while cleaning a rug; start with an inconspicuous area. If you are uncertain about your ability to effectively clean the rug on your own, Feizy recommends you first consult a rug cleaning professional. Feizy accepts no liability for damages that a rug may incur during the cleaning process listed below. Everyday accidents happen, but that doesn't mean your rug's appearance has to suffer. Here are six steps to ensure your rug won't pay the price of mishaps.

- 1 ACT FAST
- 2 BLOT - NEVER RUB
- 3 CLEAN - EDGE TO CENTER
- 4 DO NOT SOAK
- 5 PAT AND FAN DRY
- 6 BRUSH PILE

SOLUTION FORMULAS

Food and Beverage: Vacuum dry spills thoroughly on machine-made rugs. For wet spills, use 1/4 teaspoon of mild liquid detergents with a cup of water.

Red Wine: Pouring salt over spills on all dark liquids will absorb the liquid like a sponge.

Pet Messes: Use a vinegar solution, 1 cup white vinegar to 2 cups of water. Rinse with cold water and blot dry.

Paint, Oil & Grease: Use nail polish remover. Rinse with cold water and blot dry.

GLOSSARY

Border: A design around the edge of a rug, surrounding the field. The border usually includes a wide band with a repeating design, called the main border.

Cartoon Mapping: A grid on paper with colored spaces to guide rug weavers in the execution of a rug's design.

Dhurrie: A flat weave, pileless rug generally composed of simple, geometric designs. Most Dhurries are woven in India, Afghanistan, or Pakistan and are made of wool or cotton.

Dye (natural/synthetic): A substance used to color fiber, yarn or textiles.

Field: The part of a rug's design surrounded by the border. The field may be blank or contain medallions or an all-over pattern.

Flat weave: Any rug woven without a knotted pile.

Foundation: The combination of warps and wefts in the body of a rug.

Fringe: Warps extending from the ends of a rug, which are treated in several ways to prevent the wefts and knots from unraveling.

Glide Reflection: Rigid motion with reflected repetition along a line.

Guard borders: Narrow decorative designs flanking the main border.

Hand-tufting: A form of hooking; yarns are pushed through the foundation of a rug (usually canvas) with a tufting gun to form a pattern.

Kilim: A flat weave pileless rug woven using the tapestry technique. Commonly decorated with geometric patterns and bright colors, these rugs are usually used in high traffic areas like kitchens and game rooms.

Knots per square inch: Number of knots per square inch rates the knot quality in Hand-knotted rugs. Usually noted by the K.P.S.I. designation (i.e., K.P.S.I. 240).

Loom: A wooden structure that holds the warp and weft threads for weaving the rug. It can be vertical or horizontal. The height and width of the loom determines the rug size.

Matting: The result of the untwisting of the yarn and intermingling of the yarn tips as a result of foot traffic.

Medallion: The large enclosed portion of a design, usually in the center. Typical shapes are diamonds, octagons, ovals, and hexagons.

Nap: Top or body of the rug where the knot ends are cut.

Needlepoint: A flat weave, pileless rug woven using a stitch similar to a cross-stitch. Mainly produced in China, workers peer through the canvas to follow the design, which is spread out flat underneath it. Workers stitch directly onto the canvas.

Patina: The mellowing of the surface appearance of a rug usually with age or use. Can also be achieved with chemical washes.

Pile: The nap of the rug, or the tufts remaining after the knotted yarns are clipped.

Plug: A piece of a rug sewn or woven into the hole of another rug.

Ply: Two or more yarns spun together.

Scatter Rug (throw rug): Any small rug under 3' x 5'. Usually used as kitchen, bathroom, or front door rugs.

Sergering: A method of finishing edges of area rugs by using heavy, colored yarn sewn around the edges in a close, overcast stitch.

Shearing: The professional removal of a sheep's wool.

Soumak: A flat weave, pileless rug woven from a technique that produces a herringbone effect. This special weaving technique is also known as weft wrapping. Soumaks generally have a mixed cotton and wool foundation with geometric and brightly colored designs. This weaving method is also used to produce storage bags, cradles, and other every-day necessities.

Spin: The direction of a yarn's twist.

Symmetrical knot: A knot tied on two warps; also known as the Ghiordes or Turkish knot.

Talim card: A written description of the numbers of pile knots and their colors needed to create a specific design. Used in the execution of a rug's design.

Tibetan knot: A distinctly different knot. Tibetan rugs are woven by wrapping a continuous length of yarn over a rod laid across the warps stretched on the loom. When the rod has been wrapped for its entire length, a knife is slid along the rod, cutting the wrapped yarn into two rows of pile tufts.

Translation: Rigid motion with repetition along a line.

Turkish knot: See "Symmetrical knot".

Turn-arounds: Reversals in direction of the new wefts.

Warp: Comprising the foundation, parallel warp yarns run the length of the rug, and are interlaced with wefts.

Warp-faced: A rug in which warps are more closely spaced than wefts and wefts are concealed. In a balanced plain weave rug, warps and wefts are equally visible.

Warp Offset: A technique whereby some warps are held tightly in place while others in the same rug are held in place loosely.

Weft: The yarns woven horizontally through the warps.

Whip Stitch: A stitch used to overcast and lock the final weft in rug ends.

Woolen: A wool yarn of mixed staple that has been carded. Fibers are neither as long nor as parallel as worsted yarn. The average length of woolen yarn is shorter than 3 inches.

Worsted: A process that occurs prior to spinning, whereby wool yarns are firmly twisted from combed fibers that are longer than three inches in length. This process improves the wool's quality by leaving only the longer pieces of fiber for final spinning. It is used to weave more intricate patterns.
