Round Stool with Crossed Legs

Origin

Frustrated with the production challenges of his previous stools and chairs designs, the designer spent months thinking how to produce a seat that would be somewhat ergonomic, yet easy to produce, with minimal waste.

The Spring stool is the result of this research, a marvel of creativity and craftsmanship.

The serpentine allows the wood to bend, whilst the cross underneath prevents the beams from reaching their breaking point.

Description

The Spring stool is a new take on the classic round stool with crossed legs.

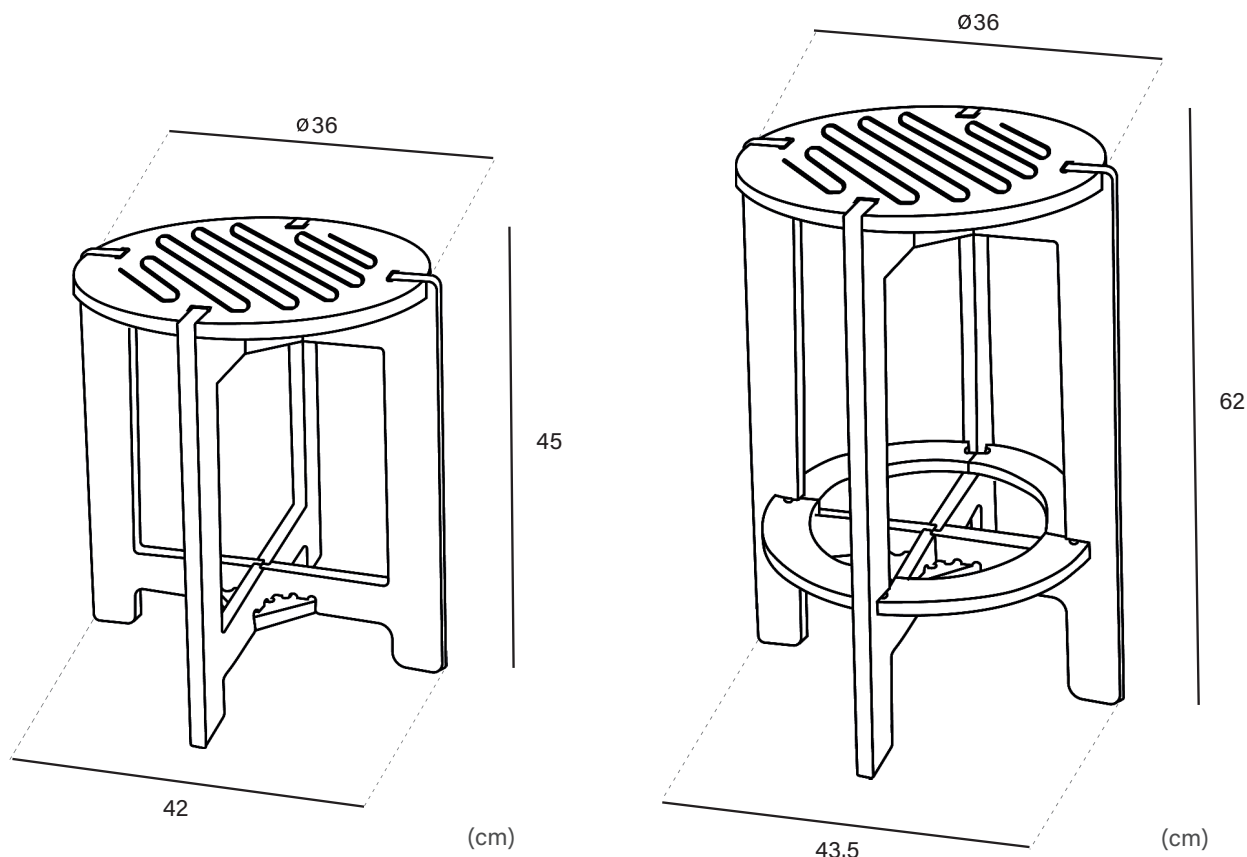

It features an innovative seat that reminds the shape of a spring, as well as being flexible like one, hence the name: Spring.

Minimal, playful, yet very elegant, it synthesises the Hoioh essence.

Versions

Usually sold in 2 versions, 45 cm (for tables and desks) and 62 cm (for 90 cm high kitchen bars), it can be produced on demand at variable heights - for example 73 cm, for higher bars.
