Welcome to the future of beauty. To a

Welcome to the future of beauty. To a space that emphasises sustainability, responsibility, and a mindful attitude towards what we apply on our skin. To a new definition of what's effective, calling into question not only ingredients, but the way they are sourced and cultivated. In our selection of winners, we looked to brands that are leading this conversation. From championing the 'made in India' movement to using recyclable packaging and supporting local farms—they epitomise the idea of conscious beauty.

From Himalayan wild cherry and rosehip oil to alpine water and edelweiss grown on the Swiss Alps—their skin, hair, and body collections offer the best of both worlds. In collaboration with NGOs, they have also contributed to girls' education in rural India.

PARO

Created by the founders of Good arth, and rooted in Vedic philosophy, star products include a hair oil with bhringadi, brahmi, amla, and arnica; an exfoliator with oatmeal and nityam; and a fragrance called Clean Air.

PUREARTH

The brand incorporates ingredients sourced from the high altitudes of the Himalayas. And the products are made using traditional techniques like 'ghani' for extracting oil. In fact, their bitter apricot oil for body and hair is so pure you can drink it. We also love their mitti raw honey masque and rose gold strobelighter serum.

MORINGA WHAT

They collaborate with smallholding farmers in India to create 100 percent cold-pressed moringa oil and an exfoliant. Natural, non-toxic, cruelty-free, and sustainable—this is everyday skincare with a long-term impact.

ESSENTIAL BODY

Every single product is hand-blended by the founder, with no more than 100 bottles made at a time. Comprising plant-based ingredients, like sweet almond oil, Dead Sea salt, organic Arabica coffee, Manuka honey from New Zealand, and organic matcha green tea from Japan, the products are luxurious and potent.

UMA OILS

Their range includes clarifying, brightening, and anti-ageing oils and masks, featuring ingredients like multani mitti, almond extract, honey, and aloe, all of which are cultivated in a farm in Raipur. Moreover, they support female artisans in rural India, reinvest a third of their profits into the local community, and repurpose any waste they may generate. >
