High Hump Instructions, 1967-72

Thank you!

Thank you for purchasing a product from Level 7 Motorsports! We have been in business since 2001 and have built a very diverse list of completed projects. Some of these projects have shown us a need for certain parts in the market. We are very passionate about what we do and are fortunate enough to be able to share some of these parts with you.

Product Information / Installation

Our high hump transmission cover is a reproduction of the factory high hump cover, but extended further back to completely cover a Tremec T56 Magnum 6 Speed transmission. You will also have room to get the transmission up high enough to get pinion angles correct on a truck that has been significantly lowered. Below is a photo showing a factory low hump floor. You can see in the photo that there is a raised area to the rear of the transmission tunnel, just under the bench seat. The new cover will be set on top of this area.

In the next photo you will see a factory high hump cover that we extended to fit over a T56 magnum. This photo will also show you the locations of each fastener. The cut line on the floor is fairly self explanatory but we do recommend cutting a rough opening a bit too small at first.

Set your new high hump cover down on the floor and mark the outside diameter as well as the hole locations. Once you have made your mark, you will be able to drill holes and make your final clean cut on the floor.

We recommend you install the new cover using 3M 08611 ribbon sealer to seal between the cover and the floor. We also include the necessary fasteners and rivnut to cleanly install the cover. To install the rivnuts you will need to purchase a rivnut gun. These are available from Harbor Freight (1210) or the one we use, Astro Pneumatic (1442) off of Amazon. You will drill a $\frac{23}{64}$ " hole to install the rivnut. We have included one extra rivnut for you to test with. Once you have the rivnuts installed, you can simply bolt the cover down with the ribbon seal between the floor and cover.
