

GARDEN & GUN

DAILY SHOT The GARDEN & GUN BLOG

BELLE DECOR

Winter Wear from Southern Hands

By M.K. Quinlan

December 13, 2013

With temperatures predicted to reach record lows this winter, we thought you might be on the hunt for some accessories to keep you warm over the next few months. Here are three artisans doing their part to keep the South's rich textile tradition alive by crafting winter accessories the good old-fashioned way.

Organic Woolworks

Middleburg, Virginia

Not only are Organic Woolworks' products knit by hand, but the wool used to make them are sourced from Gum Tree Farm in Chesapeake, Virginia, where owner Franny Kansteiner raises more than seventy sheep a year. Kansteiner's fingerless gloves marry an old-fashioned look with modern day utility (Has anyone else ever tried to Instagram with full-finger gloves on?). She also makes capes, hats, and a handsome pair of men's shooting gloves.

<http://gardenandgun.com/blog/winter-wear-southern-hands>