Left-right confusion can affect your child's performance and activities in various ways.

Children need to understand where things are in relation to themselves, like putting a knife to the right of the plate, watching for an approaching vehicle on the left (or right); navigation; following directions; skills like throwing, kicking, hopping, etc. also need a child to have an internal sense of left and right.

- Left and right confusion can cause mix-ups with similar letters and numbers like b and d and 6 and 9;
- reading words from right to left instead of left to right.
- failing to develop a dominant hand when learning to write.
- Maths: carrying numbers over from the right side to the left; numberlines - negative numbers on the left; plotting points ...
