ABORIGINAL CONTEMPORARY

'Wildflowers' is Aboriginal Contemporary's first exclusively ceramics exhibition, and when the artworks arrived, I unpacked them with great excitement. It is a truly stunning body of work and if early responses from our customers are anything to go by, this certainly won't be our last ceramics exhibition.

Why is the show called 'Wildflowers'? That's best explained by Iwiri artist, Inawinytji Stanley.

"Nganana anu mingkulpaku Fregonta munkara munula talingka ngalya wirkara nyangu tjulpun-tjulpunpa tjuta. Ngayulu kangkurungku wangkangu 'Wai rikina mulapa'. Wirunya alatjitu. Pot nyangampa tjuta kala wiru mulapa tjupun-tjupunpa purunypa"

"We went to get Mingkulpa (bush tobacco) the other side of Fregon, when we came over the tali (sandhill) we saw lots of tjulpun-tjulpunpa (wildflowers). My sister said 'Wai! Rikina mulapa'. It was really beautiful. All these pots, they're so colourful like that tjulpun-tjulpunpa."

Iwiri was set up to promote the wellbeing, culture and language of Anangu people living far from their traditional Country. The shapes and designs of their ceramic art are expressions of the artists' ancient Tjurkurrpa.
