INSTALLATION

About Austere HDMI Cables. Austere's III Series and V Series 4K HDMI cables at the 1.5m and 2.5m lengths fully comply with and are Premium Certified to meet or exceed 4K HDR standards and performance. Austere 4K cables that are 5.0m or longer do not qualify for Premium Certification, but are rigorously tested to meet the same specifications. All 4K cables support speeds equal to or greater than 18Gbps. Austere HDMI cables are bi-directional (except for the 5.0M active cables). The cables support Audio Return Channel (ARC) enabling them to send audio data to a connected source without the need for a separate audio cable. The majority of HD televisions have a single HDMI input that is compatible with ARC, so be sure to plug your Austere cable into that port to use the ARC feature.

Austere's VII Series 8K cables fully comply with and are Ultra High Speed Certified to meet or exceed the HDMI 2.1 specification. All 8K HDMI cables support speeds equal to or greater than 48Gbps and are bi-directional. All 8K cables are Enhanced Audio Return Channel (eARC) enabled to support the most advanced audio formats and highest audio quality. A compatible eARC device, such as an 8K television or 7 and 9 channel soundbars, is needed to use this feature.

Installing your Cables. Prior to installation, be sure all of your devices have their mains power plug unplugged from any outlet. Begin by plugging in one end of the HDMI cable to the source device first. Be sure to note the orientation of the cable matches the orientation of the HDMI connector on your device. Next, install the opposing end directly into the back of your television.

Active Directional Cables. Austere HDMI cables that are 5.0M or longer in length are directional. This means that the connecting ends are specific to where they need to be plugged in. Each connection end is clearly marked; 'Source' and 'TV'. Begin by plugging in the end labeled 'Source' directly into the source (Satellite box, receiver) device first. Next, install the end labeled 'TV' directly into the back of your television.
