BOBBY COLLINS, MUSIC DIRECTOR FINALIST

Bobby Collins has conducted a variety of ensembles including symphony, chamber, and pit orchestras, as well as contemporary music ensembles ranging from beginning to professional level. He currently serves as Music Director and Co-Founder of The Sound Ensemble, an innovative contemporary music collaborative in Seattle, and Conducting Assistant to Music Director Sarah Ioannides at Symphony Tacoma. Recent awards include the Legh Burns Conducting Fellowship for the Pacific Northwest Conducting Institute as well as being named one of the 2017-18 Conducting Fellows for Allentown Symphony Orchestra. Bobby is active regionally and has appeared in performance with groups such as Saratoga Orchestra, Rainier Symphony, Cascade Symphony, Thalia Symphony, and Inverted Space Ensemble. He is uniquely gifted at crafting engrossing concerts to enrich and entertain diverse audiences.

It has been an honor and a joy to return to the Bainbridge Symphony Orchestra as a Music Director Finalist. While playing French horn with the group a few years ago, I was impressed not only by the music making but by the sense of family within the orchestra. In returning as a conductor, I have come to believe that the BSO is a microcosm of the entire Bainbridge Island community. Your support for the arts and for local talent is a joy to observe and is a precious commodity.

Thank you for joining us today. I hope that our performance of this magnificent music will enrich your lives and be a reminder of the goodness and greatness for which we all strive. – Bobby Collins

PROGRAM NOTES

Violin Concerto No. 1, Op. 77

Composed: 1948 | Premiered: 1955 By Dmitri Shostakovich Born: September 25, 1906 | St. Petersburg, Russia Died: August 9, 1975 | Moscow, Russia

Program Note by Bobby Collins:

Much of Shostakovich's music sheds light on the tragedies and atrocities that he observed, for which he was repeatedly reprimanded by the Soviet government. His choice to continue writing a piece of absolute music (music without a story) – exactly the type of music for which he came under scrutiny during one of these periods of examination – demonstrates significant courage and willingness to quietly defy the government.

When the concerto was finished, Shostakovich wrote to his friend David Oistrakh saying "...I don't think it should be performed just now. Let's wait for better times." Indeed, the premiere didn't occur until 1955, two years after the death of Stalin.

The first movement is a meditative experience. One can imagine walking alongside the composer through the streets of Moscow, reflecting on the world around, both beautiful and grotesque.

The second movement is a wild ride that has challenged soloists and orchestras since its first performance. Listen for the first break-neck theme that is presented by the flute and bass clarinet. The first section gives way to a slightly slower tune, presented by the soloist with plucking strings and crisp notes in the winds. This new theme is handed around and builds until it becomes a romping tune. All of these themes swirl back around, crashing into one another until the movement comes to a glorious, if chaotic, end.

The third movement is a Passacaglia, which means it has one seventeen-measure theme that is repeated, as the rest of the orchestra and soloist develop the music. See if you can count the nine repetitions of the theme as it is passed around the orchestra. It was this movement that was being composed while the composer was under governmental review. In it you can hear the solemnity of the proceedings paired with the beauty of the soul and ideals of Shostakovich. Page | 4

After the magnificent cadenza, the final movement begins. The energetic tune dances madly through the xylophone and woodwinds, followed by a playful theme in the solo violin. As the orchestra and soloist dance in and around each other, listen for a quotation from the Passacaglia that signals a transition into the final section of the piece. Growing and accelerating, the music builds to a triumphant end.

Symphony No. 4 in F minor, Op. 3

Composed: 1878 By Pyotr Ilyich Tchaikovsky Born: May 7, 1840 | Viatka, Russia Died: November 18, 1893 | St. Petersburg, Russia

Program Note from the composer:

"The introduction is the germ, the leading idea of the whole work.

This is Fate, that inevitable force which checks our aspirations towards happiness ere they reach the goal, which watches jealously lest our peace and bliss should be complete and cloudless...This force is inescapable and invincible. There is no other course but to submit and inwardly lament.

The sense of hopeless despair grows stronger and more poignant. Is it not better to turn from reality and lose ourselves in dreams?

O joy! A sweet and tender dream enfolds me. A bright and serene presence leads me on.

How fair! How remotely now is heard the first theme of the Allegro! (Fate) Deeper and deeper the soul is sunk in dreams. All that was dark and joyless is forgotten. Here is happiness!

It is but a dream, Fate awakens us roughly.

So all in life is but a continual alternation between grim truth and fleeting dreams of happiness. There is no haven. The waves drive us hither and thither, until the sea engulfs us...

The second movement expresses another phase of suffering. Now it is the melancholy which steals over us when at evening we sit indoors alone, weary of work, while the book we have picked up for relaxation slips unheeded from our fingers. A long procession of old memories goes by...There are moments when young blood pulsed warm through our veins and life gave all we asked. There were also moments of sorrow, irreparable loss. All this has receded so far into the past. How sad, yet sweet to lose ourselves therein!

In the third movement no definite feelings find expression. Here we have only capricious arabesques, intangible forms, which come into a man's head when he has been drinking wine and his nerves are rather excited...Suddenly memory calls up the picture of a tipsy peasant and street song. From afar come the sounds of a military band...

The fourth movement...A rustic holiday is depicted. Hardly have we had time to forget ourselves in the spectacle of other people's pleasure, when indefatigable Fate reminds us once more of its presence. Others pay no heed to us. They do not spare us a glace, nor stop to observe that we are lonely and sad. How merry, how glad they all are!...And will you still say that all the world is immersed in sorrow? Happiness does exist, simple and unspoilt. Be glad in others' gladness. This makes life possible."
